FDR Creates Office of War Mobilization

BYRNES WILL DIRECT HOME FRONT EFFORT

New 'Agency To Unify Work of Existing Agencies' In President's Control.

VINSON'S 'STABILIZER'

Kentucky Judge Takes Over Byrnes' Old Job as Economics Director.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt created a new Office of War Mobilization today to be directed by James F. Byrnes, who will exercise virtually complete powers over all home front war efforts.

The new office is to: develop unified programs and establish policies for maximum use of America's natural and industrial resources for military and civilian needs, for effective use of national manpower outside the armed forces, for maintenance and stabilization of civilian economy and for adjusting that economy to war time conditions.

Byrnes is giving up his job as economic stabilization director, and that will be taken over by Judge Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky, now a member of the United States circuit court of appeals in the District of Columbia. Vinson served in congress for 14 years before he went on the bench and is considered an authority on taxation and economic affairs.

The new Office of War Mobilization was actuated in the Office of Emergency Management in the president's executive office. Therefore it will be subject to the "direction and control of the president."

The executive order setting it up said it was to unify activities of federal agencies and departments "engaged in or concerned with production, procurement, distribution or transportation of military or civilian supplies, materials and products and to resolve and determine controversies between such agencies or departments."

Exceptions will be some of the controversies regarding price controls and food, the control of which

Blood Donors Get Army And Navy 'E' Merit Certificates

(Picture on Page 2)

In recognition of their part in the organization of the Mansfield blood donor service, 15 members of the Red Cross blood donor committee and 10 organizations received Army-Navy "E" certificates of merit yesterday in presentation ceremonies at Red Cross headquarters.

Lieut.-Commander A. E. Heiser assisted by Lieut. Eugene Lounsberry, U. S. Navy, and Lieut George Bateson, U. S. Army, presented the awards.

In congratulating the Red Cross and other organizations Lieut.-Commander Heiser said, "We have always taken for granted that regardless of the emergency the Red Cross is there and doing their job. And although the American Red Cross is the greatest voluntary organization in the world they have yet to fail in the enormous requests made upon them."

The Army-Navy "E" presentation coincided with the first anniversary of the blood donor service here. Just one year ago today the first mobile donor unit took blood from Mansfield donors. Since that time Mansfield and Richland county donors have given 2,946 pints of blood.

National quota for a month is 390,000 pints and during May donations to the Mansfield unit amounted to 460 pints, far greater than its proportionate share.

GOP Accepts Dem Dare on Secret Costs

Sends Bricker Measure Party Once Called Portal-to-Graft.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Republican members of the Ohio house of representatives, accepting a dare from Democratic colleagues, today sent to Gov. John W. Bricker legislation granting the state highway director more freedom in awarding contracts.

The measure allows the director to keep secret his engineer's estimates of project costs and to award contracts in excess of the estimates.

When a Democratic administration six years ago sought similar legislation, Republican legislators denounced it, contending it would open the way for possible graft.

Rep. A. Lee Fair of Holmes county, acting Democratic floor leader, recalled the Republicans' opposition yesterday as the house took up a senate-house conference report on the bill already approved by the senate.

"I dare you to approve it and I hope you do," he declared.

Rep. L. D. Mooney (R., Hocking), accepted the challenge, asserted the taxpayers had nothing to fear from the highway bill because the present state administration had been above reproach in its highway activities.

The conference report was approved, 75 to 34, and messaged to the governor for his signature.

Highway Director Hal G. Sours said the legislation authorized practices in effect in most other states. He said these practices would facilitate letting of contracts.

Members of the legislature prepared today to work through Saturday in an effort to complete their work this week for sine die adjournment June 8.

There was a question whether they could wind up this week because about ten senate-house conference committees were wrestling with bills unsatisfactory to either the house or the senate.

The senate bill to exempt "share-the-ride" motorists from responsibility for the safety of

SETS RATION OF QUART A MONTH

Fisher Reveals How Liquor's To Be Handled at Start of Allotment Program.

Ohio's initial liquor rationing allowance will be one quart, or two pints, for a four-week period from June 1 to June 26, inclusive.

Announcement of the allotment came today from State Liquor Director Don A. Fisher in Columbus.

Fisher said holders of ration books would be limited to a single purchase over the four-week period. He added that a purchaser could not buy a single pint at one time and later return during the same period to buy a second pint.

Quarts and fifths (four-fifths of a quart) are to be treated identically under the ration program, Fisher explained, since virtually all distillers are bottling in the fifth size.

The director indicated subsequent rations might also be of four-weeks' duration. He said,

County authorities said they were advised last week end that the pair had taken the DeWiel car and had stolen gasoline from relatives of the Bridges youth.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHT ON ATTU

Yanks Storm Last Two Enemy Positions, Cutting Japs Into Small Pockets.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON - The navy reported today that American forces were engaged in violent "hand-to-hand" fighting against the Japanese on Attu island in the Aleutians, as it revealed that U. S. troops were storming the last two enemy positions on the embattled island.

The U. S assaults which began two days ago and apparently were continuing indicated that American forces were attempting to slash the last two Jap positions into small pockets of resistance.

"U. S. army troops gained several important points along the ridge south of Chichagof corridor," the navy said. "Hard hand-to-hand fighting over rugged terrain continued."

The battle report revealed that America's northern forces have penetrated a part of Fish-Hook ridge, about one and five-eighths miles southwest of Chichagof harbor.

ACTIVE CIVIC FIGURE DIES IN HOSPITAL

Suffered Stroke Early Today at Home; Had Complained of Ill Health Thursday.

Stricken with apoplexy at his home early today, Herman E. Homberger, 67, Mansfield postmaster for nine years, died at 11:25 a. m. at General hospital without regaining consciousness.

The popular postmaster and civic leader complained of a headache while at his desk yesterday but he remained at the postoffice until last night. He retired early following a short walk and was found unconscious in bed about 2:45 a. m. today by Mrs. Homberger. She said he had been up a short time before he was stricken and when he returned to bed, she spoke to him but he did not answer.

He was removed to the hospital about 3 a. m. in an ambulance. Members of the family and close friends were with him when he died. His home was at 647 Park avenue west.

Mr. Homberger was named postmaster April 9, 1934, succeeding Harry E. Hawley. Last October, President Roosevelt gave him a life appointment as postmaster.

His associates at the postoffice were shocked and grief-stricken at Postmaster Homberger's unexpected death.

Speaking for postal employes, William T. Houston, assistant postmaster, said: "He was a grand executive and his death is a great shock to us. He was well liked by everybody on his staff and every one of us will miss him a lot. He treated everyone alike and none of us ever heard him say anything disparaging about anyone."

Houston, who has been in the postoffice for 44 years and assistant postmaster since 1925, will automatically become acting post-

'LAST RESORT'

Doughton Agrees U. S. Sales Tax May Be Necessary.

WASHINGTON - (AP) — Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the tax-framing house ways and means committee, long-time foe of a federal retail sales tax, said today he might favor such a tax "as a last resort" to help finance the war.

"I am speaking for no other member of the committee," he said, "but for myself, I believe that a sales tax should be adopted only, if all other reasonable means of taxation have been exhausted."

Doughton expressed this view as Capitol Hill began speculating on how to raise $16,000,000,000 additional, in taxes and compulsory savings, as recommended by President Roosevelt.

Famous Krupp, Zeiss Plants Latest Targets

Great Load Of Explosives Shatters Nazi Munitions Source, Mosquito Bombers Hit Optical Works; Italian Bombings Sweep On.

(By Associated Press)

Giant RAF bombers, pursuing their mission in Allied global strategy to smash German war centers into impotence, returned to Essen last night and dumped another great load of explosives among the grimy, sinister buildings of the Krupp works, for years the source of munitions for German armies.

Twenty-three bombers failed to return from the assault which was carried out "in great strength," indicating that the attack—the 56th on Essen—approached in fury the raid on Dortmund Sunday night, in which 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped, and the massive assault on Duesseldorf Tuesday night. Essen is 22 miles northeast of Duesseldorf.

Coming only a few hours after President Roosevelt's announcement that the combined British-American staffs in Washington had ended their meetings "in complete agreement on future operations in all theaters of the war," the assault must have given Germans in the Rhine-Ruhr industrial areas an unpleasant vision of the future.

WAR ENTERING FINAL CHAPTER

End of FDR, Churchill Talks Seen as Start of Double Allied Offensive.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Conclusion of the strategy conference between the president and Prime Minister Churchill was viewed in some quarters today as marking the beginning of the final phase of this global war—a phase in which the United Nations are destined to undertake full scale offensives in both Europe and the Pacific.

The end of the historic meeting was announced by Mr. Roosevelt late yesterday. He said simply that "complete agreement" had been reached on future plans. What those plans are will become known only as they unfold in action.

The very wording of the president's statement, however, suggested that when the conference began there were question's of vast strategical importance which required answering to the satisfaction of both British and American leaders. The fact that, as Mr. Roosevelt indicated, they have been answered leaves no doubt that decisions of supreme importance have been made.

The president's statement said only this:

"The conference of the com-

HOUSE CONCURS

Passes Anti-Numbers Bill as Catlett Explains Change.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Without debate, the house today concurred in senate amendments to the anti-numbers racket bill, completing passage of the measure which drastically increases penalties for operators of numbers' houses. The vote was 90 to 13.

Rep. John Catlett (R.-Richland) explained senate amendments to the bill which establishes a maximum seven-year prison penalty. He said the Attorney General, original sponsor of the bill, had no objection to the amendments which exempt operators of bingo games and raffles for charitable purposes, such as churches, from prosecution.

"This is recognition that we are not trying to go after any religious organizations which might be operating what conceivably could be termed a scheme of chance," Catlett said.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

STOCKHOLM—(By Wireless)—Allied spokesmen would do well, I think, to follow the lead of Winston Churchill's address to congress, in which he said the Allies would show no mercy toward the German and Italian peoples until they abandoned or destroyed their present regimes of tyranny.

More and more Allied propaganda can be turned effectively against Hitler and Mussolini, but with that we could well refrain from threats of postwar retaliation against the masses of the people of Germany and Italy.

Clapper

One fact that is emphasized here so close to Germany is that Goebbels is working desperately to hold the allegiance of the German people. He is doing that by telling them that a dire fate awaits them if Germany is defeated.

In building up that line the German press eagerly exploits every item that can be found in the American or British press about the determination of the Allies to re-educate or exterminate or sterilize Germans after the war. Extreme statements in Allied countries make the best German propaganda at this time when fear is the chief weapon of the Nazi regime in holding the German people together.

People who have come out of Germany recently and who are friendly to our side—such as escaped prisoners—say that there are many signs the Germans have lost confidence, but that Goebbels' slogan of "Victory or Bolshevism" is effective, as well as the extreme "extermination" in threats in Britain and America.

Of course the best Allied propaganda is the Allied bombing of Germany and Italy. That impresses the Germans and the neutrals more than anything else.

Some here who have long been intimately informed about Germany regard it as highly significant that the Germans in Tunisia stopped fighting before it was necessary—while they still had ammunition. That circumstance has not been lost on the Swedes, the best informed of whom regard it as indicating what will happen on a larger scale when the Allied offensive is pressed home.

The Germans in most places from Berlin west and north now can notice increasing danger from the air. Anyone walking down Unter der Linden in Berlin will see some buildings damaged in the vicinity of the Adlon hotel. At last report the Adlon itself appeared to be still unhit although three doors away a four-story building has been completely destroyed. A number of hotels and apartments in the Tiergartenstrasse, where officers live, have been hit. For a time after the March 1 raid the area around the Hotel Esplanade was roped off from the public because of an unexploded time bomb. There has been some heavy damage around railroad tracks in the suburbs.

Industrialists here know what damage is being done to German production. The entire Phillips electrical works near Amsterdam, employing 20,000 persons, was laid flat some months ago—completely demolished. Such losses have a most devastating effect on production schedules, because so many components of war machines are missing as a result.

The point of this is that it drives the German military machine into an attitude of conserving its equipment. It leaves the Axis weakened for a war of attrition. Hundreds of planes being lost on the ground now are far less easily replaced than our own losses. We could now afford to be losing far more planes than Germany loses, instead of fewer as is actually the case. That fact, as informed industrialists here put it, is a sentence of doom already pronounced.

Incidentally, the fact that in the last few months Swedes who are well informed on what is going on inside Germany have come to the conclusion that Allied victory is certain, accounts for the haste with which Sweden is now moving to enlarge its representation in America.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—Ever since Pearl Harbor the east and the intermountain area have been hearing that the people of the Pacific coast feel that they are more seriously, more intimately, at war than their fellow countrymen beyond the Rockies. In San Diego one sees the reason why. San Diego is a city of the war and for the war, swollen by the war to enormous size and expanse, concerned with nothing else but war with the hated and unforgivable Japanese to the almost total disregard of the Germans. They had their Japs here in the days of peace and always suspected that the Japanese fishermen were interested primarily in spying on our navy and our vital works and places and only incidentally, and as a blind, in the business of catching fish.

Pegler

They have seen green American soldiers and sailors disappear into the haze of the Pacific and have seen many of them come back on stretchers or feebly walking. The whole area far back into the hills and beyond them over in the southwestern desert teems with soldiers, marines and bluejackets training for war and awaiting that unpredictable hour when they will quietly vanish to be replaced by others. There are guns visible for some of the public roads and mysterious areas are posted and patrolled by sentries and the planes which growl up and down the coast and stand boldly out to sea, are up there not only to give their crews experience but to protect ships going and coming and prevent a repetition of Pearl Harbor.

Some of the wrecked equipment of war comes back to San Diego for salvage and scrap and it surely is no military secret that new stuff is going out, but not as much as the fighters could use, and possibly, not as much as they need. There are war windows in San Diego and war babies who never will see their fathers, and little brides who have thumbed their way, so to speak, to the jumping off place to be with their men of this army and navy, taking their chances on finding quarters in an overcrowded camp. There are many no doubt, whose parting kiss within a few weeks, will be farewell. A lot of them get jobs in the airplane plant and some exceptional girls, such as the young widow of an enlisted sailor who has a baby nine months old, are taken into the offices of the navy.

Of course, there are war widows and war babies elsewhere, but, although there are no statistics, it seems that there must be more of them in San Diego in proportion to the population. Young wives have flocked here to the water's edge when young American men shove off to some of the most brutal fighting in the history of war.

The degree of hatred of the Japs on a per capita basis probably is not as intense in this hugely swollen San Diego as it is in other California cities where the original California population is still predominant. The eastern American or one from the plains or the south is inclined to hold, that, after all, a Jap born in this country who never saw Japan might be loyal if he but had a chance.

The majority of Californians, however, including many of high intelligence, hate them all, trust none and would frankly write race into the constitution if they could to revoke the citizenship of those who hold it, intern them, every one, until the war is over and then deport all who were born or ever studied in Japan and forbid any new Japanese to set foot on American soil after that. This is not entirely a new feeling. It existed before, but it has been intensified by Pearl Harbor, Bataan, Guadalcanal and the murder of captive Doolittle raiders.

Now and again the established local citizens permit themselves to wonder what will happen when the war is won and suddenly the jobs are ended, but that is a thought that is quickly swept under the rug.

Finally, for the comfort of the east, it can be reported that although San Diego considers herself to be under the guns of the Japs or thereabouts and more grimly at war than most other cities, the motor traffic is heavy on the long-haul highways and enlivened by old-style prewar madmen who drive like hell.

MOVE STARTED IN CONGRESS TO REVAMP OPA

Legislators Out To Do Own Shaking Up as Brown Sidesteps Action.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Efforts to line up the powerful house steering committee behind a move to revamp the Office of Price Administration were underway today as Price Administrator Prentiss Brown's penchant for compromise delayed a spontaneous shakeup within the agency.

The politically-schooled OPA chief, drafted for Washington's hottest domestic job after his tenure as Michigan senator, neatly sidestepped a showdown between clashing personalities within the organization—J. K. Galbraith and Lou R. Maxon—and postponed a decision "until the second week in June."

"I'm not worried about personality clashes at the top," Brown told newsmen. "I'll pick the one I think best and let the other go."

Although Brown declared that he was more interested in getting the subsidy program for a rollback of food prices into effect, his inaction on OPA's internal crisis did not quiet the clamor for a reorganization in congressional quarters.

Rep. Lyle Boren (D) Okla., long a critic of what he terms OPA's "Napoleonic attitude" toward business, declared it his purpose to get the house steering committee to "officially reiterate" directly to the president the need for an internal reorganization of the administrative branches of the price and ration agency.

Boren, who heads a committee investigating grade-labeling, said he wanted it made clear, however, that he will seek a resolution that does not include Brown, whom he compared with "a cowboy who climbed onto a horse already saddled."

At the same time, Rep Wright Patman (D) Tex., disclosed that he will propose an amendment to the Commodity Credit Corporation loan bill transferring OPA's food price and rationing authority to War Food Administrator Chester C. Davis.

It was indicated that a rider also would be offered to block payment of salaries of any OPA officials participating in a subsidy program which is virtually taboo in congress.

DETROIT MOURNS AT FORD BIER

Schools Observe Minute of Silence, Workers Lay Down Tools as Mark of Respect.

DETROIT —(INS)— Mourned by grimy factory workers, immaculate executives, college students, women, and small children, all of whom passed by his bier in reverence and respect, Edsel Ford will be buried today.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. in Christ church chapel, and will be conducted by Rev. Frank W. Creighton, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan and the Rev. Francis B. Creamer, pastor of the church.

Because of the small chapel, only the immediate family and close associates will attend the final rites of the president of the world's most fabulous industrial empire.

As their final tribute to their boss, the hundreds of thousands of employes in Ford plants throughout the world will lay down their tools at 2:30 p. m. and observe a five-minute silence.

In each of the city's 319 schools there will be a one-minute silence sometime during the afternoon. One pupil in each school will review the life of the man who was born in humble surroundings, eventually controlled one of the world's greatest fortunes, and who through his own efforts left an indelible mark on the nation.

City offices will be closed from noon to 5:30 p. m.

The picture of the high regard in which Ford was held by rich and poor alike was unmistakably unfolded yesterday afternoon and last night, as an endless line passed by Ford's bier.

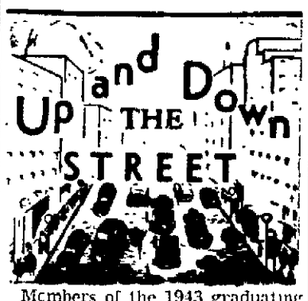
CLEVELAND —(AP)— The regional war labor board today announced approval of an application from the Ohio Oil company, Findlay, O., for payment of time and a half to 500 pipeline workers working in excess of 40 hours a week.

Up and Down THE STREET



Members of the 1943 graduating class at Mansfield Senior high school caused some surprise yesterday when they were seen strolling toward the high school dressed in kids' clothes. It's a part of the annual "kids' day" on which the pupils attend classes dressed in the attire they might have worn in their grade school days. The annual event is highly popular with the pupils, but reports from the high school indicate that some of the faculty members frown on such "goings on."

Former pupils and teachers of Mansfield Senior high school who are now serving on the armed forces of the United States were honored this morning when Robert Huber, president of the Victory Corps Student Council, presented the school with a plaque which will be placed in the second floor display window at the school. The plaque honors the fighting men and women of Mansfield Senior high school who have joined the fight for the American way. Presented on behalf of the victory corps and the student body by Huber, it was accepted by Principal Glenn G. Rohleder.

J. R. Harrington, manager of the Mansfield airport, wants city councilmen to see what's been done in recent months to develop the port as a flight training center, and he's decided the best way to get them all together at once is to offer them a free meal. So the nine council members, Mayor W. J. Locke, and Council Clerk R. R. Black have an invitation from Harrington to be his guests tonight at the airport. After dinner he will take them on a tour of inspection to show them where $5,000 has been spent recently to equip the port for a training center. Mayor Locke said he would caucus with council after the airport visit on legislation scheduled for action at next Tuesday night's meeting.

HEDY HURRIES THIRD WEDDING

Cuts Honeymoon Short To Go Back To Shower After She Gets 'Ring and Husband.'

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD—Hedy Lamarr postponed her honeymoon with John Loder today in favor of taking a shower—for the movies.

All day yesterday she spent in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer bath, shielded from the eyes of 40 electricians, carpenters, and assistant directors by a bathing suit, and a cloud of steam. The scene wasn't finished when she knocked off work last night, shook the water out of her eyes, put on her best velvet dress and married Loder, husband number three.

The ceremony was a quick one at the home of her friend, Mrs. Conrad Veidt, widow of the late character actor.

"Please hurry," she told Justice of the Peace Cecil D. Holland. "I want my ring and my husband."

The justice obliged, the hostess poured champagne, and the newlyweds were enroute to Miss Lamarr's nearby house within 30 minutes. Matron of honor was Lady Elsie Mendl, and the best man was her husband, Sir Charles.

Only other witnesses were Miss Lamarr's mother, Gertrude Kiesler; Sam Pierce, friend of the groom, and half a dozen press agents and photographers.

The call-sheet ordered Miss Lamarr back to the showers this morning in the furtherance of a motion picture, "The Heavenly Body."

BATTLE AGAINST MIDWEST FLOOD NOW BEING WON

High Waters Break 99-Year Record In Missouri; Two Fliers Killed.

(By International News Service)

Vigilant patrols of soldiers, sailors and civilians guarded levees along swollen rivers in six mid-west states today as high waters receded bringing hope that the battle against one of the worst floods in a century had been won.

A new all-time high water mark of 42.30 feet was recorded at Cape Girardeau, Mo., breaking the 99-year-old mark of 42.19 set in 1844. The flood stage at Cape Girardeau is 32 feet.

Two army fliers from George Field, Ill., were believed to have been killed when their plane, one of a formation patrolling the flood area, crashed in the swollen Wabash river three miles south of Vincennes, Ind.

Maj. Milton Heath of George Field said the names of the occupants would be announced as soon as the next of kin were informed.

An estimated 3,551,000 acres of land were flooded in the six mid-west flood states, the bread basket of the nation. Acerages flooded included 1,000,000 in 70 Illinois counties; 800,000 in 35 Oklahoma counties; 700,000 in Indiana; 442,000 in 18 Missouri counties, and 300,000 each in Arkansas and Kansas.

Flood waters, menaced lowland areas along the Mississippi and Illinois rivers although the danger was lessened considerably.

At Wolf Lake, Ill., the Mississippi river broke through the levees in three places and forced a huge 2,000-acre war plant to suspend operations. The town was under martial law as was Grand Tower, Ill., where the power plant supplying electricity to southern Illinois was threatened by the flood.

The danger was lessened appreciably at Beardstown, Ill., where the Illinois river stood at 29.5 feet against the expected crest of 29.78. Army officials, however, refused to permit the town's 4,500 evacues to return to their home until all possible danger had passed.

Mansfield this week turned down a chance at staging the Ohio semi-pro baseball tournament this summer.

"What's that?" you say, "we didn't know Mansfield even had a chance at the semi-pro tournament."

But it did have, along with other cities in the old Ohio State league, and I don't know how many other towns. Chances are that the invitations to put on the tournament were pretty generally broadcast over the state by Ray Dumont, president of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress.

When Dumont's first bid reached this desk a week ago, I glanced at it, tossed it in the waste basket.

But this week Dumont sent me a copy of a letter he had written to the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, giving this city a shot at the tournament and pointing out that Mansfield, as a former organized baseball spot, would be a desirable tournament city.

But I know for sure that Fremont and Fostoria received similar bids from Dumont, so it was nothing to get excited about.

So I called my Euclid avenue neighbor, Secretary John Routzon of the Chamber of Commerce, and we quickly agreed that this was not the year for Mansfield to try to put on the tournament, for good and sufficient reasons, but that it would be a mighty fine thing sometime in the future.

Dumont was informed that Mansfield, because of its central location, would be a fine tournament city, but that the grandstand here had burned down and could not be replaced now because of wartime building restrictions, and we hoped he would keep us in mind after the war is over.

The fact that Dumont broadcast his bids over the state isn't too surprising. He's a great guy for publicity, is Dumont, and that's one way to get it.

In the past, cities like Youngstown, Cleveland, Toledo and other semi-pro hot spots, have had a monopoly on the tournament. If Dumont really wants to send the tournament into new territory, it must be for the purpose of increasing the membership of the National Semi-pro Congress

We know
It's a blow
To the semi-pros.
But if we can't go,
We just can't go.
No, no.

Schoolboy Titles Go On Block

Spring Sport Season Brought To Climax.

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)— The annual Ohio high school track, baseball, tennis and golf tournaments opened at Ohio State university today amid indications that competition this year will be the keenest in the 36-year history of the event.

Many of the 1,000 finalists, the cream of more than 15,000 entered in the district meets, will be concluding their scholastic athletic careers before entering the armed forces and will be out to make a "grand slam" in their events.

One of the most closely contested events promised to be the high jump in which last year's mark of 5 feet, 10¾ inches was almost certain to be shattered. At least six different district qualifiers surpassed that mark.

In the Salem district meet, four men—Rockwell of Akron Buchtel, Murphy of Akron North, Frame of Boardman and Carter of East Palestine—tied for first place with jumps of 6 feet, 2 inches. In the Cleveland district, Kanda of Marshall and Gutzky of Rhodes jumped 6 feet.

There also was a possibility that the State Class B shot put record of 52 feet, 8½ inches may be broken this year. George Cokor, of Orange high school, who last year captured the discus throw, hurled the shot 52.5 feet at the Chagrin Falls district meet.

A new state record also may be set in the Class A 880-yard run. Donnelly of Marshall turned in 2:00.1 in the Cleveland district, only .4 of a second faster than Paulen of Catholic Latin. The present record is 1:58.5.

George Sampson, Brookville sprinter, was given an even chance of toppling the Class B 100-yard dash record. Sampson ran the event in 9.8 seconds in the district eliminations at Springfield, one tenth of a second faster than the present mark.

Keen competition also was anticipated in the annual golf match in which Sylvania, the defending champion, was expected to experience difficulty with the fast-stepping squads from Columbus North, Canton McKinley and Hamilton.

In the district play, Sylvania recorded a 342 compared with a 317 for Hamilton, 320 for Columbus North and 329 for McKinley.

No final events were scheduled today. Track preliminaries were held this afternoon, with finals in track and field events to be held tomorrow afternoon. First of two rounds of golf also was held today. The final round will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Cleveland East Tech was an overwhelming favorite to win its 5th consecutive track championship as the two-day meet entered its opening phases, with the outcome of the Class B track still uncertain.

The defending champions, the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Xenia, O., placed only three men in the state finals and was given only an outside chance to repeat.

Tiltonsville, Class A baseball champions, defended its title again Bexley, East Cleveland, Lima, Central, Akron Garfield, Ironton, Cincinnati Elder and Springfield.

Reading, Class B champions last year, was not entered in the finals this year, leaving the battle for division honors to Columbus, St. Charles, Yorkville, McGuffey, Ney, The Plains, Taylor-North Bend, Englewood and Randolph.

Make Triple Play In 10-9 Softball Victory.

John Simpson Bulldogs chalked up their second straight softball victory over Johnny Appleseed Pioneers yesterday, pushing over a run in the ninth inning to take a 10 to 9 decision

Jim Hahn grabbed a hero role, lining a single to left field to score George Thomas from third with the winning run.

Simpson pulled a triple play in the eighth inning. With runners on first and second, Stucky grounded to Thomas at third who tagged the base for the forceout. Thomas' throw to third nipped the runner, and when Rowe overran second base, he was thrown out, Thomas to Burton.

The same two teams meet again Monday at 4:30 p. m. at North Lake park.

Picks Outstanding Stars In Wartime Diamond Season

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Wartime conditions have placed major league perspective slightly out of focus this year, making it a relatively difficult task to classify accurately the "bests" in baseball.

Rookies and veterans have found it easier this year to fill significant roles in the pennant races because of the shortage of manpower. But war or no war, there are several personalities who would have shone in an otherwise normal year. Here is how they look to us:

Top players: in the National League it must be Billy Herman of the Dodgers. The second baseman is playing with all the verve of his halycon days despite being in his 13th Major league year. He has hovered round the .350 mark in batting all year and has been among the pace-setters in runs-driven-in.

Vern Stephens wins the American League accolade. Now in his sophomore year, Stephens is not only the circuit's flashiest shortstop but its leading hitter. He has set the plate pace most of the season and now heads both loops with an average of .371.

Best rookies: it's Pitcher Jesse Flores of the Philadelphia Athletics. This talented Mexican moundsman has won six games in a row, his only defeat coming at the hands of the Boston Red Sox on April 21 by one run after he had given up two hits. Outfielder Dick Wakefield of Detroit, who currently looks like another Ted Williams, ranks high on the freshman list.

Jack Kraus of the Phillies, Red Barrett of the Pirates and Nate Andrews of the Braves have all made a close early race of first year honors in the National. Kraus looks like the best of the lot with a more varied assortment of stuff, but Barrett and Andrews have authored some of the best mound jobs in the senior circuit.

Best managers: Ossie Bluege of the Senators and Lou Boudreau of the Indians. Bluege has done an excellent job with a Washington outfit figured no better than second-division material for 1943, while Boudreau's clever leadership has made the tribe a definite contender.

Bucky Harris' job with the Phillies makes him the National league standout. Berthed in the graveyard of managers, Harris has made the Phillies a winning club and an exceptionally fine drawing card.

Cleveland's Oris Hockett changed his mind about sticking to a defense job and gave the Indians their biggest break. This youthful flychaser is belting the ball at a clip well over 300 and joines Johnny Lindell of the Yankees as two of the American league's most potent second-year successes. Lindell, a converted pitcher, has much to learn but has kept above the .300 mark ever since he took over the right field job and looks like a natural hitter.

Report Three Wire Meets

Simpson Wins One; Appleseed Splits Even.

Results of junior high school telegraphic track meets are still coming in, with three included in the latest batch, showing Johnny Appleseed winning from Osborn Bath 78 to 22, and losing to Columbus West 42-58, and John Simpson defeating Osborn 88½ to 11½.

Appleseed took 10 firsts in the Osborn meet and four from Columbus West, while Simpson made a clean sweep of 12 firsts over Osborn.

Toledo Compiles Five Game Streak

(By Associated Press)

Although Toledo currently is the hottest club in the American association with a five-game victory string, Indianapolis is keeping its lead well protected by combining baseball's two essentials—good hitting and good pitching. The Tribe is two games ahead of second place Toledo.

John Hutchings turned in a masterful four-hit job last night to blank Minneapolis 4-0, Indianapolis' 13th win in 18 starts..

Toledo linked five straight victories by taking a doubleheader from Milwaukee, 9-2 and 6-4.

The champion Kansas City Blues suffered their second straight defeat by the Columbus Red Birds, 4-3, and dropped into sixth place. The Birds moved into third, a half game behind Toledo.

St. Paul at Louisville was postponed.

Indians Drop Back To Second

Hank Edwards Injured As Tribe Drops Two.

BOSTON— (AP) —The Cleveland Indians were back in second place today after a brief reign at the top of the American League.

A double defeat by the Boston Red Sox, coupled with Washington's win over St. Louis, accounted for the switch which moved the surprising Nationals into the lead by half a game.

The Sox blanked the tribe 2 to 0 in a morning encounter yesterday and repeated with a 4 to 3 decision in the afternoon. Boston hasn't lost to the Indians in four games this season.

Jack Salveson goes to the mound today in quest of the Redskins' first triumph over the easterners. Kendall Chase, who won four of his five games last year at Cleveland's expense, is Manager Joe Cronin's hurling choice.

The tribe experienced an acute manpower shortage yesterday when Manager Lou Boureau was forced to use an infielder in the outfield. Third Baseman Ken Keltner was ailing with sinus and missed both contests. Hank Edwards watched the afternoon tussle from the dugout after spraining his wrist in the morning affair.

Rookie Eddie Turchin replaced Keltner at third and Russ Peters, normally an infield replacement, subbed for Edwards in the outfield. Right fielder Oris Hockett has been inactive since Saturday because of a sprained thumb.

Edwards' injury will keep him on the bench for at least a week but Keltner expects to return today.

MORNING GAME

CINCINNATI— (AP) —Today is another day when the Cincinnati Reds see if they can get anybody to the ball game between breakfast and lunch.

The starting time with the Phillies, who so far have scored not a run in their current stay and are beginning to show signs of too much prosperity, is 11 a. m. At this hour night shift workers are hoped to be enticed to the park and Newt Kimball for the P's and Johnny Vander Meer for the Reds are the pitchers.

Elmer Riddle gave the Phils their second straight shutout yesterday, with the Reds only needing 15 hits to get seven runs. One of the 15 was a home run by Max Marshall.

Cincinnati got to elderly Si Johnson in the fourth and scored all their runs in that and the next three innings. Frank McCormick opened the fourth with a single, took second on a sacrifice, and Marshall singled him in.

Marshall almost was doubled off first on Eric Tipton's liner to Paul Busby, but Jim Wasdell let the throw get away from him and Ray Mueller then got a two-bagger to score Max.

From then on the Reds scored almost as they pleased.

Big Ten Champions Are Pressed By Outsiders.

MILWAUKEE —(INS)— Western Conference track champions were assured today of being hard pressed in at least seven events of the 18th annual Central Collegiate meet opening in Marquette Stadium tomorrow. Twenty-two teams will compete.

Fortune Gordien of Minnesota was expected to win the discus throw but James Fieweger, Lawrence college's one-man track team, threatens to upset him in the shot put. Leonard Zimmy of Loyola is another possible shot put winner.

Jim Milne of Michigan State, defending C. C. high jump champion, was favored to take the event from Gil Hertz and Bob Dodgell of Wisconsin who shared the Big Ten championship.

Fieweger, who also was entered in the high jump, and Arthur Egbert of Marquette were certain to push Chicago's Whitey Hlad in the 220- yard low hurdles.

The mile and two-mile marks of Virgil Alston of Miami, O., university are better than those of the Western Conference contenders, Clarence Dunn of Illinois and Floyd Foslien of Minnesota. Cy Perkins of De Kalb Teachers is another threat in the mile.

John Liggett of Michigan State figured to push Bob Kelley of Illinois in the half mile. Kelley also faces strong competition from Dale Faulitz of Michigan State in the quarter mile.

Senators Cop Lead In Race

Pennant Porridge Comes To Boil For Holiday.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE major league pennant porridge is coming to a furious boil for the Memorial day weekend with the heat turned up as high as it will go.

In the American League the Washington Senators moved into first place last night to give the junior circuit its third pace-setter in five days and in the National league the St. Louis Cardinals moved within a game and a half of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who were trounced for the second straight time at Pittsburgh and were so incensed they almost started a riot.

The Pirates, who had battered Brooklyn 17-4 on Wednesday, won again 9-5 on the margin of four runs in the eighth inning and in the midst of their rally Umpire George Barr called a balk on hot-headed Johnny Allen.

The Dodger pitcher charged into the umpire and precipitated a melee which resulted in four Brooklyn players — Allen, Fred Fitzsimmons, Rube Melton and Les Webber—all being banished from the field.

However, this tumult, occurring in the presence of 14,724 fans at a night game in Forbes field, hardly was the most important development of a busy day in the big show even though it was the noisiest.

The program started with a morning game at Boston where the last place Red Sox unceremoniously ambushed the Cleveland Indians, who had ousted the New York Yankees from the American league lead on Sunday. Tex Hughson pitched five-hit ball to shut out the Tribe 2-0.

In the afternoon the Red Sox repeated the trick, winning 4-3 as Oscar Judd outpitched Jim Bagby.

Then last night the Washington Senators whipped the St. Louis Browns 4-2 in their second straight floodlighted fracas. This lifted the Senators into first place and dropped the Browns into the cellar.

Lefty Hal Newhouser, who couldn't beat the Yankees a single time last year, held them to four hits in an afternoon game, fanned 14, most strikeouts this season and four short of the major league record, and led the Detroit Tigers to a 3-2 victory that placed them in a tie with New York for third place.

In another night game, the Philadelphia Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox 7-5 and the result was to bunch five American league clubs within two games of the top. With doubleheaders coming up both Sunday and Monday and the leaders matched against each other, the scramble is likely to become even more confusing.

The National league race also tightened up as the Cardinals nosed out the Boston Braves 3-2.

The Cincinnati Reds punctured the Philadelphia Phillies' balloon with a second straight shutout 7-0.

New York's Giants also trimmed the Chicago Cubs again 3-2, as Lou Novikoff failed to hit for the second day in succession.

Mansfield this week turned down a chance at staging the Ohio semi-pro baseball tournament this summer.

"What's that?" you say, "we didn't know Mansfield even had a chance at the semi-pro tournament."

But it did have, along with other cities in the old Ohio State league, and I don't know how many other towns. Chances are that the invitations to put on the tournament were pretty generally broadcast over the state by Ray Dumont, president of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress.

When Dumont's first bid reached this desk a week ago, I glanced at it, tossed it in the waste basket.

But this week Dumont sent me a copy of a letter he had written to the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, giving this city a shot at the tournament and pointing out that Mansfield, as a former organized baseball spot, would be a desirable tournament city.

But I know for sure that Fremont and Fostoria received similar bids from Dumont, so it was nothing to get excited about.

So I called my Euclid avenue neighbor, Secretary John Routzon of the Chamber of Commerce, and we quickly agreed that this was not the year for Mansfield to try to put on the tournament, for good and sufficient reasons, but that it would be a mighty fine thing sometime in the future.

Dumont was informed that Mansfield, because of its central location, would be a fine tournament city, but that the grandstand here had burned down and could not be replaced now because of wartime building restrictions, and we hoped he would keep us in mind after the war is over.

The fact that Dumont broadcast his bids over the state isn't too surprising. He's a great guy for publicity, is Dumont, and that's one way to get it.

In the past, cities like Youngstown, Cleveland, Toledo and other semi-pro hot spots, have had a monopoly on the tournament. If Dumont really wants to send the tournament into new territory, it must be for the purpose of increasing the membership of the National Semi-pro Congress

We know
It's a blow
To the semi-pros.
But if we can't go,
We just can't go.
No, no.

Bulldogs Edge Pioneer Club

Make Triple Play In 10-9 Softball Victory.

John Simpson Bulldogs chalked up their second straight softball victory over Johnny Appleseed Pioneers yesterday, pushing over a run in the ninth inning to take a 10 to 9 decision

Jim Hahn grabbed a hero role, lining a single to left field to score George Thomas from third with the winning run.

Simpson pulled a triple play in the eighth inning With runners on first and second, Stucky grounded to Thomas at third who tagged the base for the forceout. Thomas' throw to third nipped the runner, and when Rowe overran second base, he was thrown out, Thomas to Burton.

The same two teams meet again Monday at 4:30 p. m. at North Lake park.

Schoolboy Titles Go On Block

Spring Sport Season Brought To Climax.

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)— The annual Ohio high school track, baseball, tennis and golf tournaments opened at Ohio State university today amid indications that competition this year will be the keenest in the 36-year history of the event.

Many of the 1,000 finalists, the cream of more than 15,000 entered in the district meets, will be concluding their scholastic athletic careers before entering the armed forces and will be out to make a "grand slam" in their events.

One of the most closely contested events promised to be the high jump in which last year's mark of 5 feet, 10¾ inches was almost certain to be shattered. At least six different district qualifiers surpassed that mark.

In the Salem district meet, four men—Rockwell of Akron Buchtel, Murphy of Akron North, Frame of Boardman and Carter of East Palestine—tied for first place with jumps of 6 feet, 2 inches. In the Cleveland district, Kanda of Marshall and Gutzky of Rhodes jumped 6 feet.

There also was a possibility that the State Class B shot put record of 52 feet, 8½ inches may be broken this year. George Cokor, of Orange high school, who last year captured the discus throw, hurled the shot 52.5 feet at the Chagrin Falls district meet.

A new state record also may be set in the Class A 880-yard run. Donnelly of Marshall turned in 2:00 1 in the Cleveland district, only .4 of a second faster than Paulen of Catholic Latin. The present record is 1:58.5.

George Sampson, Brookville sprinter, was given an even chance of toppling the Class B 100-yard dash record. Sampson ran the event in 9.8 seconds in the district eliminations at Springfield, one tenth of a second faster than the present mark.

Keen competition also was anticipated in the annual golf match in which Sylvania, the defending champion, was expected to experience difficulty with the fast stepping squads from Columbus North, Canton McKinley and Hamilton.

In the district play, Sylvania recorded a 342 compared with a 317 for Hamilton, 320 for Columbus North and 329 for McKinley.

No final events were scheduled today. Track preliminaries were held this afternoon, with finals in track and field events to be held tomorrow afternoon. First of two rounds of golf also was held today. The final round will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Cleveland East Tech was an overwhelming favorite to win its 5th consecutive track championship as the two-day meet entered its opening phases, with the outcome of the Class B track still uncertain.

The defending champions, the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Xenia, O., placed only three men in the state final and was given only an outside chance to repeat.

Tiltonsville, Class A baseball champions, defended its title again Bexley, East Cleveland, Lima, Central, Akron Garfield, Ironton, Cincinnati Elder and Springfield.

Reading, Class B champions last year, was not entered in the finals this year, leaving the battle for division honors to Columbus, St. Charles, Yorkville, McGuffey, Ney, The Plains, Taylor-North Bend, Englewood and Randolph.

Picks Outstanding Stars In Wartime Diamond Season

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Wartime conditions have placed major league perspective slightly out of focus this year, making it a relatively difficult task to classify accurately the "bests" in baseball.

* * *

Rookies and veterans have found it easier this year to fill significant roles in the pennant races because of the shortage of manpower. But war or no war, there are several personalities who would have shone in an otherwise normal year. Here is how they look to us:

Top players: in the National League it must be Billy Herman of the Dodgers. The second baseman is playing with all the verve of his halycon days despite being in his 13th Major league year. He has hovered round the .350 mark in batting all year and has been among the pace-setters in runs-driven-in.

Vern Stephens wins the American League accolade. Now in his sophomore year, Stephens is not only the circuit's flashiest shortstop but its leading hitter. He has set the plate pace most of the season and now heads both loops with an average of .371.

Best rookies: it's Pitcher Jesse Flores of the Philadelphia Athletics. This talented Mexican moundsman has won six games in a row, his only defeat coming at the hands of the Boston Red Sox on April 21 by one run after he had given up two hits. Outfielder Dick Wakefield of Detroit, who currently looks like another Ted Williams, ranks high on the freshman list.

Jack Kraus of the Phillies, Red Barrett of the Pirates and Nate Andrews of the Braves have all made a close early race of first year honors in the National. Kraus looks like the best of the lot with a more varied assortment of stuff, but Barrett and Andrews have authored some of the best mound jobs in the senior circuit.

Best managers: Ossie Bluege of the Senators and Lou Boudreau of the Indians. Bluege has done an excellent job with a Washington outfit figured no better than second-division material for 1943, while Boudreau's clever leadership has made the tribe a definite contender.

Bucky Harris' job with the Phillies makes him the National league standout. Berthed in the graveyard of managers, Harris has made the Phillies a winning club and an exceptionally fine drawing card.

Cleveland's Oris Hockett changed his mind about sticking to a defense job and gave the Indians their biggest break. This youthful flychaser is belting the ball at a clip well over .300 and joines Johnny Lindell of the Yankees as two of the American league's most potent second-year successes. Lindell, a converted pitcher, has much to learn but has kept above the 300 mark ever since he took over the right field job and looks like a natural hitter.

Indians Drop Back To Second

Hank Edwards Injured As Tribe Drops Two.

BOSTON— (AP) —The Cleveland Indians were back in second place today after a brief reign at the top of the American League.

A double defeat by the Boston Red Sox, coupled with Washington's win over St. Louis, accounted for the switch which moved the surprising Nationals into the lead by half a game.

The Sox blanked the tribe 2 to 0 in a morning encounter yesterday and repeated with a 4 to 3 decision in the afternoon. Boston hasn't lost to the Indians in four games this season.

Jack Salveson goes to the mound today in quest of the Redskins' first triumph over the easterners. Kendall Chase, who won four of his five games last year at Cleveland's expense, is Manager Joe Cronin's hurling choice.

The tribe experienced an acute manpower shortage yesterday when Manager Lou Boureau was forced to use an infielder in the outfield. Third Baseman Ken Keltner was ailing with sinus and missed both contests. Hank Edwards watched the afternoon tussle from the dugout after spraining his wrist in the morning affair.

Rookie Eddie Turchin replaced Keltner at third and Russ Peters, normally an infield replacement, subbed for Edwards in the outfield. Right fielder Oris Hockett has been inactive since Saturday because of a sprained thumb.

* * *

Edwards' injury will keep him on the bench for at least a week but Keltner expects to return today.

MORNING GAME

CINCINNATI— (AP) —Today is another day when the Cincinnati Reds see if they can get anybody to the ball game between breakfast and lunch.

The starting time with the Phillies, who so far have scored not a run in their current stay and are beginning to show signs of too much prosperity, is 11 a. m. At this hour night shift workers are hoped to be enticed to the park and Newt Kimball for the P's and Johnny Vander Meer for the Reds are the pitchers.

Elmer Riddle gave the Phils their second straight shutout yesterday, with the Reds only needing 15 hits to get seven runs. One of the 15 was a home run by Max Marshall.

Cincinnati got to elderly Si Johnson in the fourth and scored all their runs in that and the next three innings. Frank McCormick opened the fourth with a single, took second on a sacrifice, and Marshall singled him in.

Marshall almost was doubled off first on Eric Tipton's liner to Paul Busby, but Jim Wasdell let the throw get away from him and Ray Mueller then got a two-bagger to score Max.

From then on the Reds scored almost as they pleased.

Toledo Compiles Five Game Streak

(By Associated Press)

Although Toledo currently is the hottest club in the American association with a five-game victory string, Indianapolis is keeping its lead well protected by combining baseball's two essentials—good hitting and good pitching. The Tribe is two games ahead of second place Toledo.

John Hutchings turned in a masterful four-hit job last night to blank Minneapolis 4-0, Indianapolis' 15th win in 18 starts.

Toledo linked five straight victories by taking a doubleheader from Milwaukee, 9-2 and 6-4.

The champion Kansas City Blues suffered their second straight defeat by the Columbus Red Birds, 4-3, and dropped into sixth place. The Birds moved into third, a half game behind Toledo.

St. Paul at Louisville was postponed.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox, cellar dwellers in the American league, gazes out at his men as they practice at Fenway park on a day off. Joe, shown left, could use a few victories to lift his club out of the second division. He gets 'em when the Bosox play the Indians. At right is Bobby Doerr, star second baseman, who is hitting about .270.

Senators Cop Lead In Race

Pennant Porridge Comes To Boil For Holiday.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE major league pennant porridge is coming to a furious boil for the Memorial day weekend with the heat turned up as high as it will go.

In the American League the Washington Senators moved into first place last night to give the junior circuit its third pace-setter in five days and in the National league the St. Louis Cardinals moved within a game and a half of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who were trounced for the second straight time at Pittsburgh and were so incensed they almost started a riot.

The Pirates, who had battered Brooklyn 17-4 on Wednesday, won again 9-5 on the margin of four runs in the eighth inning and in the midst of their rally Umpire George Barr called a balk on hot-headed Johnny Allen.

The Dodger pitcher charged into the umpire and precipitated a melee which resulted in four Brooklyn players — Allen, Fred Fitzsimmons, Rube Melton and Les Webber—all being banisfied from the field.

However, this tumult, occurring in the presence of 14,724 fans at a night game in Forbes field, hardly was the most important development of a busy day in the big show even though it was the noisiest.

The program started with a morning game at Boston where the last place Red Sox unceremoniously ambushed the Cleveland Indians, who had ousted the New York Yankees from the American league lead on Sunday. Tex Hughson pitched five-hit ball to shut out the Tribe 2-0.

In the afternoon the Red Sox repeated the trick, winning 4-3 as Oscar Judd outpitched Jim Bagby.

Then last night the Washington Senators whipped the St. Louis Browns 4-2 in their second straight floodlighted fracas. This lifted the Senators into first place and dropped the Browns into the cellar.

Lefty Hal Newhouser, who couldn't beat the Yankees a single time last year, held them to four hits in an afternoon game, fanned 14, most strikeouts this season and four short of the major league record, and led the Detroit Tigers to a 3-2 victory that placed them in a tie with New York for third place.

In another night game, the Philadelphia Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox 7-5 and the result was to bunch five American league clubs within two games of the top. With doubleheaders coming up both Sunday and Monday and the leaders matched against each other, the scramble is likely to become even more confusing.

* * *

The National league race also tightened up as the Cardinals nosed out the Boston Braves 3-2.

The Cincinnati Reds punctured the Philadelphia Phillies' balloon with a second straight shutout 7-0.

New York's Giants also trimmed the Chicago Cubs again 3-2 as Lou Novikoff failed to hit for the second day in succession.

ALL-OUT BLOW NEEDED TO RID BURMA OF JAPS

Correspondent Says Land Route To China Can Be Reopened.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK — Only a "full-scale air, land and sea offensive" can throw the Japanese out of Burma, Walter Briggs, United Press staff correspondent, reported today in the current issue of Collier's weekly.

"The way Burma will have to be retaken," Briggs wrote, "is with what they call 'combined OPS' attack—with a huge naval force landing troops at numerous points along the Burma coast, with Allied offensive and protective aerial action, with large-scale overland attacks from points along the Indo-Burma border and by Chinese troops pushing south in Yunnan."

Allied officers, including Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell, who participated in the latest Roosevelt-Churchill conference in Washington "satisfied themselves that the overland route to China can be reopened and the enemy pushed back from the Chinese air bases which we need for bombing Tokyo," according to Briggs.

Since March, 1942, Briggs has been covering military and political news in India and Burma for the United Press. He was wounded in the hip during one of his assignments to the Burma front, but resumed his work as a war correspondent after several weeks in a field hospital.

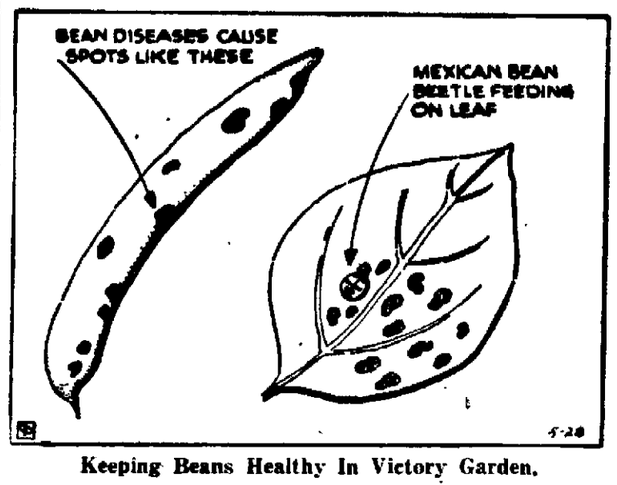
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Keeping Beans Healthy In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Ass'n)

BEANS ARE subject to certain diseases and to injury by certain insect pests, therefore, it behooves the Victory gardener to take measures to keep his bean planting healthy.

Pot-spot, or anthracnose, is a disease which is especially prevalent with beans in cool, moist growing seasons. One precaution which every Victory gardener should observe is not to cultivate, pick or handle beans when the leaves are wet. Touching the wet plants is apt to result in the spread of the spores which carry anthracnose disease from one plant to another.

Anthracnose can be recognized by the roundish dark-brown or black bordered spots with pinkish centers which it causes to appear on the pods of diseased plants, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The disease also causes dark-red canker spots to appear on the stems and leaf-vines.

This fungus disease lives over winter in the seeds and in the spring attacks the young seedling plants. As soon as the disease is recognized pull and burn the afflicted plants. The following season, as a measure of safety, plant only disease resistant varieties of beans.

The most destructive insect pest of beans is the Mexican bean beetle. The adult beetles and their larvae feed on the underside of the bean leaves, as illustrated. This beetle can be controlled by spraying the undersides of the leaves with rotenone. Since pole beans can be sprayed more easily than the bush varieties, they should be grown in preference to the bush beans in areas where the Mexican bean beetle is prevalent.

Don't Rob Your Family of VITAMINS

Just Because You Can't Buy All the Canned Foods You Want!

Food rationing does not mean that your family cannot be well fed. It just takes a little more planning. Underfed Americans cannot win the war on the home-front any more than poorly fed soldiers can on the fighting fronts.

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables Taste Better, Are Easily Prepared—Retain All Vitamins!

Besides, Fresh Fruits and Vegetables can be prepared in a variety of delicious ways, each to suit the individual taste, cooked, raw, in salads and combinations—dishes that were almost impossible to make of canned foods. Crisp, garden-fresh vegetables are ideal for experiments . . . for trying out that new dish you've always thought that John or Susan would like. But, most important of all, fresh Fruits and Vegetables retain all vitamins, a characteristic often lost in canning processes.

If you've been using canned grapefruit juice, tomato juice—rich sources of Vitamin C—and you can't get enough now, use more fresh Citrus Fruits.

UNEVEN TRENDS PERSIST DURING STOCK TRADING

Retail Spending Throughout Nation Exceeds That of Same Week In 1942.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Slightly uneven trends persisted in today's early stock market transactions.

Dow Chemical was up a point at a quiet opening and minor advances were posted for General Motors, Sinclair Oil, Allied Chemical and International Harvester. Losers included U. S. Rubber, American Can, U. S. Steel and Bethlehem.

Holders of merchandising issues derived some encouragement from the Dun & Bradstreet survey estimating retail spending this week throughout the country exceeded the comparable period last year by 7 to 13 per cent. At the same time, it was added, the dwindling of inventories continued.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Profit-taking dropped rye as much as a cent at the opening today. Wheat and oats eased under moderate selling pressure.

Wheat started ⅛-½ lower, July $1.44-1.43⅞, September $1.44 ⅜-¼, and rye was unchanged to 1 cent off, July 92½-93.

WAR ENTERING FINAL CHAPTER

End of FDR, Churchill Talks Seen as Start of Double Allied Offensive.

bined staffs in Washington has ended in complete agreement on future operations in all theaters of the war."

That the war against Japan received the fullest consideration was made clear by Mr. Churchill in his address to congress. Yet it was equally clear that there had been no change in the grand strategy previously agreed upon to smash Germany first.

In the absence of any hints as to what the conference accomplished in either the military or political fields, informed persons here speculated on the probability of several future developments:

The present strategical bombing of Germany will be followed by an invasion of the continent this summer. It will develop at times and places where the Axis least expects it, just as the American drive to throw the Japanese out of the Aleutian islands began with a surprise flanking attack on Attu rather than a frontal assault on Kiska.

The war in Europe is expected to be won by sometime next year at the latest, but the conflict in the Pacific may run on until 1945 or 1946, according to reliable estimates.

The forces available for use against Japan's Pacific flank have been greatly increased. President Roosevelt revealed at a recent press conference that the bulk of American strength already was in the Pacific. When those forces grow sufficiently strong and the time is right, there probably will be an American thrust which will so directly threaten Japanese vital interests that the Japanese fleet will be compelled to fight.

Destruction of that fleet is generally considered to be the primary objective of the American naval high command. Occupation of new island bases, now that the supply lines to the southwest Pacific have been secured, is secondary to that purpose But Japanese strategy has become so defensive within the last six months that they no longer appear willing to fight for a position which they do not need vitally.

The presence of Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell, the Allied chief in India, and his top sea and air officers in Washington for the Roosevelt-Churchill talks gave considerable weight to speculation that a drive to break the Japanese hold on Burma is a primary objective of the high command.

Participation of Russia in the war against Japan would solve the problem of bases from which to bomb the main Japanese islands, but this may not be possible at least until the war in Europe is won.

FURY OF RAF LASHES ESSEN, ZEISS FACTORY

Ruhr Hit Again By Great Load of Bombs; Jena Target of Twilight Raid.

German-occupied countries and, in the Mediterranean theater, there was no rest for the harried defenders of Italy's island invasion outposts—Sardinia, Sicily and Pantelleria.

Allied headquarters in North Africa announced the bomb-marked airfields of Villacidro and Decimomannu on Sardinia were plastered again yesterday by medium bombers and 13 defending Axis fighters were shot down in dog fights with escorting Allied fighters. Fighter-bombers returned to the tiny island of Pontelleria to blast the airfield and small Axis garrison there.

Long-range fighters of the Middle east command continued their patrol of the Aegean sea, keeping Axis eyes anxiously trained on the Balkans. They shot down at least one enemy plane.

Nazi spokesmen found occasion to warn Axis peoples against the Allied "nerve war," especially in Italy and the Balkans. A Swedish correspondent in Berlin said German sources told of propaganda leaflets spread over Italy in the past 48 hours. One German military analyst acknowledged the Allies had the power to attack Italy, but added "don't forget Malta was attacked by the Germans and Italians for many months and never gave up."

Official Russian communiques continued to ignore the situation in the Kuban delta area of the Caucasus, where the Germans report an army of 150,000 Russians is attempting to drive through Nazi positions to the Kerch strait.

The German radio said the Russians had thrown 200 planes into the battle to cover ten Russian divisions.

The RAF raid on Jena was executed by the speedy, plywood Mosquito bombers and involved a round trip of more than 1,000 miles—one of the longest ever made by the Mosquitos, which also have been used to attack Berlin.

The Berlin radio acknowledged "considerable damage" had been caused in Essen by the block-busters tossed down last night.

Nazis Admit Great Damage In Ruhr

BERLIN—(By official German wireless)—(INS)—"Great damage" wrought by British bombers in last night's mass raid on the Ruhr valley, particularly at Essen, was acknowledged today by the high command.

The usual claim that residential areas were hardest hit was made and two hospitals were asserted to have been struck by bombs. Twenty-four British planes were said to have been shot down.

The communique said Axis heavy fighter-bombers hit ships and quays in attacks on Bizerte and Sousse in liberated Tunisia.

DeGaulle, Giraud to Meet Tonight

LONDON —(AP)— Informed quarters said today Gen. Charles DeGaulle was expected to meet Gen. Henri Giraud tonight in Algiers to initiate talks which may bring about a union of French elements now fighting the Axis.

(This was the first indication that Gen. DeGaulle already had left London for North Africa, although dispatches from Algiers yesterday intimated that a meeting between the two French leaders would take place very soon.)

TAUGHT ETHICS, ARE CONVICTED

Four Mantle Club Officers Face Prison For Fraud.

WILMINGTON, Del.—(AP)—Four officers of the Mantle club, which for 15 years has preached business ethics to an estimated 30,000 members from Rhode Island to California, faced prison sentences today, convicted of using the mail to defraud and violating the securities act of 1933.

A U. S. District court jury brought in verdicts of guilty last night against Hugh B Monjar, president and founder of the organization, and three members of the club's board of governors.

Convicted of conspiracy were eight other co-defendants, including Monjar's wife, Josephine, who shared the $100,000 home Monjar admitted buying—with funds obtained from members—in the main line Philadelphia suburb of Ardmore. Three others, all west coast residents, were acquitted.

Exile Romance Of Jugoslav King, 19, Gets Royal O. K.

LONDON—(U.P.)— The romance that blossomed in exile between 19 year-old King Peter of Jugoslavia and pretty Princess Alexandra of Greece has been approved by their royal families it was reported today.

Reliable sources said that both King George of Greece, the princess' uncle, and Queen Marie of Jugoslavia, Peter's mother, have given their blessing to an early marriage.

The romance developed as they worked on war plans as refugees from their homelands in the Balkans, occupied by the Nazis.

The couple secretly were engaged in May 1942.

clear the Japanese from the high peaks in the vicinity," the navy added.

In another attack, American troops moved "to eliminate the enemy from the ridge south of Lake Cories," the other main Japanese position. The navy said this attack "is in progress."

What may be the last phase of the battle of Attu was supported by U. S. heavy and medium bombers escorted by fighter planes.

The fact that the battle reports were two days old raised the possibility that a decision may already have been reached and that only isolated snipers and small enemy groups remained to be mopped up.

Meanwhile, the navy reported that army Mitchell medium bombers and Warhawk fighter planes had stepped up their aerial offensive against nearby Jap-held Kiska, with three attacks on May 26.

Japs Swell Claims of U. S. Losses

(By Associated Press)

Japanese propagandists, working against the nearing deadline of final defeat on Attu island, broadened today their claims of destruction and damage inflicted on U. S. vessels in the battle and declared that night attacks ashore "resulted in strategical gains."

A Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press said Japanese submarines and planes had sunk a battleship, two cruisers, a destroyer and an unidentified warship and seriously damaged two other naval vessels since Sunday.

These claims were without confirmation.

Jap Diet Called In Fourth War Session

(By Associated Press)

The Japanese diet has been summoned to an extraordinary three-day session beginning June 16, a Tokyo broadcast recorded by Associated Press announced today. It will be the fourth extraordinary session since General Hideki Tojo assumed the premiership on Nov. 18, 1941.

Clamps Air Blockade On Japs at Lae

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA —(AP)— The havoc wrought by more than 28 tons of bombs attested today to Gen Douglas MacArthur's determination to blockade and deplete the Japanese garrison at Lae, New Guinea, with his air force until the day its weakened defenses can be overrun by ground troops.

His bombers have kept Lae, first occupied by the enemy Jan. 25, 1942, poorly supplied for many months by striking at shipping bound for it across the Bismarck sea and at New Guinea coastal roads over which it could be provisioned from bases to the northwest.

But yesterday's big raid by swarms of Mitchells, Liberators and Beaufighters was the first heavy one posed directly at Lae itself, only about 20 miles along the Huong gulf coast from Salamaua. And Allied ground troops, infiltrating from the scenes of their Papuan peninsula conquest some 150 miles to the southeast, stand less than 15 miles from Salamaua.

is lodged in the economic stabilization director.

Byrnes will be director of the war office and also chairman of a war mobilization committee which will assist him. Its members will be Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Chairman Harry L. Hopkins of the munitions assignments board, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board and Vinson.

In an explanatory statement, Mr. Roosevelt said he was creating the office to "unify more closely the work of the war agencies concerned with the production, procurement, transportation and distribution of military and civilian supplies, materials, and products."

"We are entering a phase of the war effort," he asserted, "when we must streamline our activities, avoid duplication and overlapping, eliminate interdepartmental friction, make decisions with dispatch, and keep our military machine and our essential civilian economy running in team and at high speed."

The president said the committee has been kept small so it can function effectively, but that heads of governmental departments and agencies would sit in with it whenever matters especially concerning them received consideration. He said the committee sometimes would meet with him in the cabinet room at the White House.

The president created the new top war agency by invoking his powers as president and commander in chief and his authority in the constitution and federal laws, particularly the first war powers act of 1941.

HUNTS FOR IDLE FARM MACHINES

WFA Seeks To Re-Distribute Agricultural Equipment.

WASHINGTONN —(AP)— The war food administration embarked today on a nationwide search for idle farm machinery, announcing it would be requisitioned by the government and distributed where it is needed most to boost food production.

The WFA promised farmers a reasonable price for such machinery. How much could be salvaged for release to active production areas has not been estimated.

A spokesman said a windfall of farm implements was left by Japanese removed from their west coast farms after Pearl Harbor and this probably would get the first attention in the campaign.

living as man and wife following Bevard's assignment to Camp Millard.

The defense maintained that Bevard had killed Mrs. Reed in self-defense March 21 during a quarrel in their apartment after leaving a beer parlor.

The prosecutor aimed to substantiate a motive of jealousy and break down the self-defense.

Depositions from 11 Canton Ill., residents, including the sheriff and police chief, along with intimate letters written to Bevard by Mrs. Reed, were exhibits on which the defense based arguments testifying to the character of the soldier and the slain woman.

During the closing arguments yesterday afternoon, the defense counsel told the jury to give consideration to the letters and pointed out that the prosecution had failed to produce evidence that the killing was intentional.

He said that Bevard accidentally killed Mrs. Reed while defending himself against her, and that the law provides that one may defend himself from such an attack with force.

Senior High Grads Publish Own Annual For Graduation

Bishop, in recognition of his 19 years at Senior high school.

It appears that compilation of editorial material and the business end of the annual was handled entirely by the pupils. Both Rohleder and Bishop said yesterday that they "didn't know of any plans for an annual. Rohleder expressed the belief that "it was a little late for an annual now."

It was announced last winter that the traditional Manhigan would not be published this year because of shortages of photo film and printing and engraving materials. However, representatives of the city and Senior high school Parent-Teacher associations recently appeared before the Mansfield board of education to make a belated appeal for publication of the annual.

Since that time, rumors, which have been alternately denied and confirmed by both class officers and school officials, have been current that a substitute for the Manhigan would appear.

DEATH CLAIMS H. E. HOMBERGER AFTER STROKE

master. He will serve until an appointment is made by the president.

A Mansfield native, he was Richland county treasurer from 1914 to 1919 and twice was service-safety director in Mansfield, the first during the administration of the late Mayor William O'Donnell and then under the late Mayor C. M. Lantz before he was appointed postmaster.

Active worker in the Democratic party for many years, Postmaster Homberger was treasurer of the county executive committee for eight years.

For a while previous to 1919 he was secretary-treasurer of the Hautzenroeder Cigar company in Mansfield. From 1919 to 1921 he was in the stock brokerage business and then entered the real estate and insurance business.

He was a member of Mansfield Masonic lodges and was a 32nd degree Mason.

As word of Mr. Homberger's death spread over the city, there came a spontaneous out-pouring of sympathetic expressions from friends and associates in various walks of life.

Among them were the following:

H. G. Brunner, vice-president of the Mansfield Savings Trust National Bank—"He was a fine public official and a grand friend. I have known him for a long time and never had a better friend. All Mansfield will miss him."

G. A. Baer—"Mansfield will certainly feel the blow of his death for he was one of the most popular officials that ever held office. We were warm friends and he was one of the swellest persons I ever came in contact with."

Fred Miller, council member—"Mr. Homberger was a great asset to Mansfield and a great humanitarian. The city will surely feel this loss."

Frank Cave, chairman of the Richland county Democratic executive committee—"He was active in civic affairs for many years and will certainly be missed. We were life-long friends and he was one of the best I had."

George C. Balliet, chairman of the board of elections—"Everyone will miss Herman Homberger for he has been a public figure here for a long time. I shall miss him personally for he was a big help to me."

Howard G. Miller, president of the city council—"I feel that Mansfield has sustained a terrible loss both among the postmaster's personal associates and his business associates."

Paul L. Kelley, city auditor—"Mr. Homberger was one of the finest men I ever knew and as a public official, we have never had any better. His death has been a great loss to Mansfield."

Funeral arrangements had not been completed early this afternoon. The body was removed to the Jones Memorial. The widow, Mrs. Beulah Homberger, survives.

passengers was virtually killed in the house judiciary committee yesterday.

The committe refused, by three votes, to recommend it for passage in the house, and then adjourned for the session.

Federal agencies had endorsed the bill on the ground it would encourage cooperative transportation of war workers. Opponents contended it was unwise to remove legal protection from passengers who might be injured in an accident.

Abolition of the $5 a day fees received by county commissioners for inspecting drainage ditches and sewer projects was practically assured when the senate completed enactment of a house bill.

Various members of the legislature had sought unsuccessfully to abolish the fees since 1937. In that year the legislature increased the commissioners' salaries after the Ohio County Commissioners association agreed to forego the fees.

The fees are collected in 32 counties and bring some commissioners as much as $500 a year. The senate vote on the bill was 18 to 12.

TRAILERITES MAY VOTE

SETS RATION OF QUART A MONTH

Fisher Reveals How Liquor's To Be Handled at Start of Allotment Program.

however, the ration unit might be varied, depending upon the state's liquor inventory.

"During the first period, every item on the state store list will be covered by the ration program," Fisher said. "This includes, Scotch, bourbon, blends, rye, Canadian whiskies, rum, brandy and cordials."

Fisher further revealed that state retail stores would operate on their old schedule of 1 p. m. until 9 p. m. (EWT) on and after June 1.

Rumors that store zonings might be changed were scotched by Fisher, who said the zones would remain as first instituted.

Meanwhile, registrations for rationing cards were proceeding at about an average pace at the Mansfield store, officials said.

It was estimated, however, that only about 60 per cent of those who mailed in application forms have actually called for their books.

Fisher warned today that those persons who had mailed their applications before May 10, but failed to obtain their books before the stores close tomorrow night will not be allowed to make purchases during the first week of the ration period.

Those who mailed their applications after May 10 will not be able to obtain their books before June 7, but will be able to make purchases at the same time, he added.

Fisher said state stores, where sales have been suspended since May 13 while employes issued ration purchase books, are now well stocked.

"We have on hand a pretty good selection of brands," Fisher remarked. "While quantities vary, most of the popular liquors should be available."

PAY-GO BILL TO MAKE PAYING OF TAXES EASIER

But Some Folks Will Have To Do a Lot More Figuring; Deductions Start July 1.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The new pay-as-you-go tax bill, as approved by senate-house conferees, will make taxpaying easy for most of the 44,000,000 income taxpayers, but it will mean more figuring for others.

A 20 per cent withholding tax is levied beginning July 1, with an exemption of $624 for a single person, $1,248 for a married person and $312 for each dependent.

Employers will take the money out of salaries and wages and pay it to Uncle Sam. The taxpayer will still have to make a settlement with the government, but in most cases he will be about even with the treasury.

Under the withholding tables made a part of the bill, a single man earning between $40 and $50 a week will have a weekly deduction of $6.60; if married, $4.20.

However, if he is single and makes over $2,700 a year or if married and makes over $3,500 a year, or if gross income outside of wages is over $100 a year, he must make quarterly declarations and pay any additional tax liability over the withholding.

The senate finance committee report explains the working of the plan as follows:

"The tax must be paid in four equal installments. The first installment will be paid in the case of a calendar year taxpayer on March 15, the second installment on June 15, the third on September 15 and the fourth on Dec. 15 of the current taxable year. However, the taxpayer may elect to pay his estimated tax in advance.

"If he filed an amended declaration, the remaining installments will be increased or decreased, as the case may be, to reflect the change in the estimate.

"For example, suppose a taxpayer filed a declaration of the estimated tax for the calendar year 1944 in the amount of $600. An installment of $150 is paid at the time of filing the return. On June 15, 1944, he filed an amended declaration disclosing an estimated tax for the taxable year of $300 instead of $600 as originally estimated. As a result of the revised estimate, his next three installment payments will each be $50."

During 1943, however, before the plan gets fully into operation, the first declaration will be required on Sept. 15. Tax payments thus far made will be credited to the taxpayer, as well as the 20 per cent withheld after July 1. He also will make an estimate next Dec. 15.

Under the plan, a tax under $50 is abated for one year, and 75 per cent of taxes over $50 is abated. In the latter case 25 per cent of one year's liability must be paid, 12½ per cent in 1944 and 12½ per cent in 1945.

CHAPTER XX

Rose Weir, 70 years old, received her callers with great dignity, her nurses had done their best for her in the way of curls, rouge, powder, filmy lace, and silk bedwear, and she made an imposing picture against her mountain of pillows. It was so swiftly to be observed that the old lady—in a magnificent sort of way—was feeble-minded, that Warren St. George, prepared to put her through a rather sharp cross-examination, found himself disarmed.

Yes, it was quite true, she said, smiling childishly, after apologizing in parenthesis for receiving these strangers while in bed and holding with a rather pathetic affection to Marc's hand while she talked as if he anchored her to reality, quite true that Marc was an American child, a Californian, too.

"It was when I was going back to Paris—my adored Paris—before America was in the war. My little snuggery at Saint-Cloud had been locked for a year, and I'd been so homesick! I had my maid, Valerie Villard, a poor girl who'd been widowed and had lost her only child, and a Filipino driver, but I didn't want to drive all the way to New York from Santa Barbara, so I went by train, and Valerie and Bonfacio brought the car. I was taking it to France.

"Valerie was, of course, going with us, and our arrangements had been to take her poor little boy, Marcel, with us. His picture was with hers on her passport, and that was probably what put it into her head when she and Bonfacio found this poor little fellow, half-starved, feverish, almost half-witted after wandering about alone in the woods. Valerie said that he looked like her child—Bonfacio didn't interfere—and they brought him straight on to the hotel and put him to bed. It was days before he was well enough to talk, and then he had forgotten everything, poor baby! Valerie had told me he was her cousin's child who had gotten ill on the way. Wasn't that," old Mrs. Weir said in coquettish appeal, "too naughty of her? But we both adored him from the beginning, and we got him on the ship with no trouble at all; it seems to me I didn't have to have a passport then, or did I, Warren? Anyway, nobody asked any questions, and we got him to Paris without difficulty. I always called him my 'war orphan.' When Valerie died Marc was just like my son, and I hope I gave him every advantage a son could have. But, Warren," Rose Weir went on with a pink-cheeked, reproachful smile, "I've got a bone to pick with you! You never come and see me. It takes all this silly business about Marc to get you as far as Santa Barbara!"

And she patted Warren's hand with a fat, white, heavily ringed hand.

"It's all a beautiful ,vague dream to her," Hugh, getting used to the sound of his rightful name, reporting to Loveday, said later. "But there isn't any question that she told us what happened. The Filipino chauffeur wouldn't have interfered, and Valerie evidently thought that she'd gotten her own child back."

Hugh came and went in her house familiarly. Larry liked him, enjoyed discussing farm affairs with him, and presently Hugh had his own room and was contributing to the family exchequer as if it were the most natural thing in the world. His was a joyous nature; everything was exciting to Hugh; the old house rang with laughter and chatter when he was there. The children adored him, and his manner with them was that of an equal; he talked to them seriously, brought them small gifts in his pockets. "What of this large fortune that our grandfather was supposed to have lost or given away?" Hugh asked Loveday; "Uncle Warren told me of it long before I dreamed that I would have any interest in it. I suppose they hunted for it? And asked questions everywhere as to where he might have put it or to whom he might have paid it?"

"Everywhere! Everybody! My mother and grandmother told me that not so long before Mother died, they had detectives here poking in rafters and taking up floor boards. They went upstairs in the barn and to the top of the windmill, but nothing was found."

"I never rake out a chicken nest without taking a good look behind it," Larry said.

"Well, you know, I think we must find it!" Hugh observed with his ingenuous smile.

"I was thinking," Loveday contributed, "that if we had sold this place all those years when we needed the money so terribly, we would have thought it was great luck. But then I never would have found you, Hugh."

"But there's another thing, Loveday," her brother said, leaning forward to extend his coffee cup for a second helping; "wasn't there a reward offered for the discovery of the lost child—of me, queer as that sounds? Was that reward claimed?"

"Well, I don't know, Marc—Hugh, I mean. You see, I wasn't quite two when someone found the body—and that's the queerest thing about it," Loveday said with an awakening face. "Hugh's body was found, for they brought my mother his little blue play suit. She sent all his clothes to the hospital, but she always kept that muddy little torn suit. It's upstairs now."

"I suppose we could find out if that reward was paid. Wasn't Annie Lum here then?" Hugh jerked his head toward the kitchen, where Annie Lum was once more slowly yet thoroughly plodding through dishwashing and sweeping and the baking of the children's noonday potatoes.

"Oh yes, she was here until after I left. But you'll get nothing from Annie Lum. She just isn't—alive."

"She's honest, I suppose?"

"I'd trust her and Wing Foo as I would you. The Chinese are honest. They think anything else doesn't pay."

"And it isn't likely that he'd put it where anyone could casually find it."

"Perhaps the man who got the reward might know something."

"I should imagine they'd have questioned him. But let's try to find out who he is and get his end of it.

Chris came later.

Loveday had heard from various members of the family of his travels in the past few years, to China, to Europe, to Rio, and she had heard of a play that failed and a play that was a success. But she had no very clear idea of his movements or whereabouts when on a hot July day he was suddenly at Friends Haven, stopping his car among the overgrown rosebushes and towering pampas grass of the shady front garden, and coming around the corner of the house toward the barns and the berry bushes where she and half a dozen other fruit pickers were busy, spreading apricots to dry under the heavily leafed orchard trees.

"Oh, Chris, how wonderful!" Loveday said, leaving the barrel that had been her seat at the head of the table and waving blackened hands as visible excuse for no more formal greeting. "Look at us! We're saving the fruit crop, but just look at us!"

"The one thing I want to do is to look at you," Chris answered. "I've never seen such color out of a Turner sunset. Seriously, what goes on?"

"Drying 'cots. We've had a bumper crop, and Larry says he can sell all we can dry. But we're just about done. No more tonight, Carmela; what you think? These keep good for tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow early, early, early," the big Portuguese woman addressed as Carmela agreed, dropping her knife, rolling down her sleeves, and smiling broadly. The other women and the children likewise stopped their work, stretched luxuriously, helped themselves to dipperfuls of water from a bucket.

"I'm stopping you," apologized Chris.

"Indeed you're not! It's time for my girls' dinner. Look, Chris, this is Owen, just walking and perfectly wild over the idea, and this is Betsey, and here's Martha. Girls, you are sights!"

She drew them about her, her flushed, tumbled daughters, with their sun-browned, handsome little faces and shining hair, and the sober, dark little boy, and smiled at him above their heads.

"Aren't they nice?" she asked.

His little second of hesitation, his thoughtful glance were the same as they had been years ago, and as always they made her heart beat faster.

"Yes," Chris agreed, "They're terribly nice, and you—you're simply grand with that gypsy thing on your head and your Chinese regalia." His laugh was full of surprise and admiration. "You're simply grand. But then you were always that."

"Come on down to the house, it's suppertime."

WESTINGHOUSE PRESENTS ITS ORDER OF MERIT TO MRS. KIENE

Mrs. Julia Kiene, Mansfielder who proved the importance of women on the home front in the war effort, today received the Westinghouse Order of Merit for distinguished service.

As director of the Westinghouse Home Economics Institute at the Mansfield plant, Mrs. Kiene conceived the idea of the Health for Victory nutrition program now used by 1,116 war plants and other organizations.

Second woman in the entire Westinghouse organization to win the honor, Mrs. Kiene was cited for her "inspiring leadership of the Westinghouse home economics institute, to the success of which she has contributed greatly; and for her vision and foresight in the field of nutrition, out of which has grown the Health for Victory clubs."

From one club organized at the Westinghouse plant in Mansfield, Health for Victory has grown in 15 months to a nationwide nutrition program followed daily by nearly 350,000 women throughout the nation. The homemakers meet once a month with home economists to plan food buying and meal preparation that helps safeguard the health of war workers, children and all members of their families.

Mrs. Kiene got her idea for Health for Victory in February 1942, when she saw a young factory worker and his wife buying $10.72 worth of groceries, but passing up foods essential to daily diets.

MRS. JULIA KIENE

Mrs. Kiene came to Mansfield in 1938 after serving as home editor of Capper's Farm Magazine for 12 years. Prior to that she was a county home demonstration agent in Topeka, Kans. Author of cookbooks for professional chefs and for brides, Mrs. Kiene received her home economics training at Kansas State college.

"It occurred to me that we housewives had a very important job to do in the nation's war effort—namely, to supply well-balanced meals as an aid to maintaining the health of men, women and children," the home economist recalled.

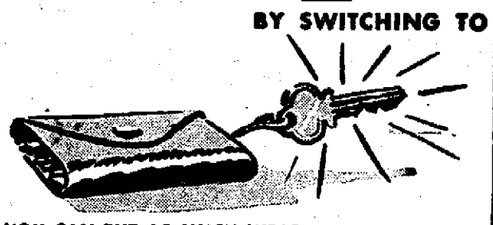
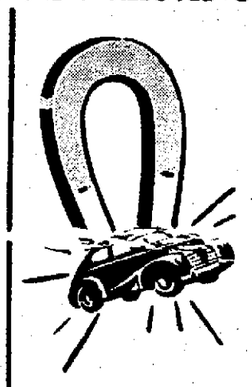
He's driving 200 miles in a minute...
but I can't arrest him!

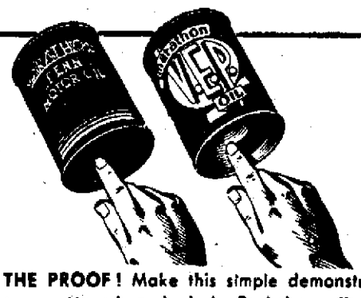
BUT EVERY MOTORIST CAN ARREST THIS UNNECESSARY "START-UP" DAMAGE, BY SWITCHING TO V·E·P ALLOYED-OIL



YOU CAN PUT AS MUCH WEAR on your motor in that first minute after you start up as you would in up to 200 miles of normal warmed up driving, experts say. That's because, when a car is standing idle, ordinary oil drains down from or drys off of piston and cylinder walls. Real damage can take place before it gets back on the job.



V.E.P. STAYS ON THE JOB! This entirely new, entirely different alloyed oil has a "magnetic-like" action which makes it cling to cylinder and piston walls—for weeks at a time. You have effective lubrication before you turn the ignition key.



FEEL THE PROOF! Make this simple demonstration at your Marathon dealer's. Feel the walls of inverted oil cans, both drained at the same time. Notice—the wall of the can which contained ordinary oil is "dry"; the V. E. P. can is still oily.

WITH REPAIR PARTS SCARCE and good mechanics even scarcer—make sure your motor gets V. E. P. protection against "start-up" damage. Remember, V. E. P. also rids your motor of harmful sludge, carbon, varnish, protects bearings against corrosion—greater threats than ever under slow-speed, short-trip driving conditions. Why not see your Marathon man, switch to V. E. P. Alloyed-Oil, today?

V. E. P. IS THE NEW DIFFERENT ALLOYED OIL THAT MAKES YOUR MOTOR LAST 50% LONGER THAN IT WOULD WITH ORDINARY OIL

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, MAY 28, 1943.

A recent Gallup poll reveals that a majority of all faiths are opposed to bombing Rome—and a similar majority would quite likely also disapprove bombing London.

It is at least interesting, if not encouraging, to note that house and senate conferees found themselves in disagreement over what they had agreed upon—which seems to make lack of understanding unanimous.

Anyhow, there's nothing small about the Ohio legislature when it comes to spending taxpayers' money—and it appears that Governor Bricker's record-breaking budget of $369,116,129 impressed legislators as being none too large.

Order By the Commander-In-Chief

BEST ARGUMENT that there should have been no strikes by Akron rubber workers is found in the quick end that was brought to the strikes after President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, ordered an immediate return to work.

Everything that was said by the president in his order to Akron strikers must have already been known by them, as, for instance: "From the point of view of the nation, these strikes are inexcusable and must therefore be accepted . . . for what they basically are—a defiance of the War Labor Board, a challenge to government by law, and a blow against the effective prosecution of the war."

Read again what the president said about picketing, and about the right to work: "I direct all picketing to cease and all employes now out on strike at the rubber plants to return to work at once. If this strike is not ended by 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, May 27, your government will take the necessary steps to protect the interests of the nation, the legal rights and properties of the companies concerned, and the rights of the patriotic workers who desire to work."

There is no political coddling in that order—it bluntly states what labor agitators and strikers should have recognized long ago . . . That picketing which seeks to prevent safe and unmolested access to a plant by employes who desire to work is illegal and that agencies of orderly government are as obligated to act to prevent strike violence as in other forms of insurrection.

Another statement by President Roosevelt in his order to Akron rubber workers may also well be borne in mind as being equally applicable to all forms of wartime work: "In the midst of a war calling for the supreme sacrifice of many in the ranks of our armed forces, it is shocking to the nation to discover that any group within our citizenry would impede, for a single moment, the production of the materials of war needed for our war effort."

More than deserved confidence seems to have been placed in what has been called "labor's no-strike pledge" for the duration of war. It will be recalled that what is being referred to as a "pledge" by union workers was no more than a promise by a few of their leaders and that there was no general vote of members to sustain the promise.

Strikes by rubber workers, coal miners, and by employes in other vital war industries, must be construed as meaning that the "no-strike" pledge of leaders is not considered binding on union members who feel that they have a grievance, and that some more effective way must be found to prevent these deterrents to the national war effort.

'White Collars' Becoming Frayed

SO MANY "white collar workers" have gone to war, or to factories, that people are beginning to worry about it. A conference in New York the other day took a very serious view of the situation.

Of course it isn't a question of dress, but of the kind of work done, and the way the worker fits into the complex system by which civilized life is carried on. People doing work in which it is customary to wear white collars are usually as important to the community as those in rough and dirty jobs—sometimes even more so. But many of them are now seriously underpaid. A spokesman for office and professional workers says:

"White collar workers, like all others, must have enough to live on, in order to maintain their morale and decent health standards. The history of such workers is one of depressed salary standards. Their grievances of long standing are a drag on national unity, on the nation's stabilizing program and on the entire war effort."

This is not a time for inflationary wage-raising, but it's obvious that some adjustments will have to be made in this field.

Reviving An Inspiring Name

THE 42ND DIVISION is to be reborn. A war department announcement tells of its re-creation.

Better known as the "Rainbow," because it was made up of national guardsmen from more than half the states, this was one of the noted divisions of the last war.

Something will be gained if the name can be applied to the new 42nd. Other armies have learned the importance of regimental names continued through many wars, as with England's Black Watch and Coldstream Guards. New soldiers are inspired by membership in such famous outfits.

Here's Hint To Golfers

BASEBALL PLAYERS cannot help wondering what the war will do to them. When it is over, will they be too old for the job?

But that needn't worry golf players. Horton Smith, top-notch golfer now in the air force, says that the war will add 10 years to his golf. At 35 years, he would ordinarily find the competition getting stiffer as time went on. Army work, however, is said to have toughened him and given him enough stamina to take on anybody for a match of any length.

Any soldier or sailor who escapes serious injury should find himself physically the gainer from his experience.

Passing around is this bright saying credited to a sailor: "I was in a phone booth talking to my girl when someone wanted to use the phone and we had to get out."

Item says: "When she stands in the middle of her mirror-lined boudoir, you could see 144 Mae Wests"—but wouldn't that be overdoing it a bit?

Report comes that "everybody in Washington is expecting something big to happen"—and it usually does.

It is argued for high heels that they keep a girl on her toes.

JAPAN ISN'T BEING COMPLETELY NEGLECTED

Fierce Fighting of Japs on Attu Hints at Enormity of Task Ahead

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE FIERCE DEFENSE being made by the Japs in the face of our determined attack on their positions among the volcanic crags of Attu provides one of the outstanding lessons of the protracted battle on this tiny, fog-shrouded Aleutian island.

It's a harsh reminder of what the Allies are up against in their task of smashing the Japanese nation as a whole.

Of course this isn't the first time by any means that the Mikado's savages have exhibited such tenacity. More than once in this war we've seen them battle until the last man was dead.

Frequently they make suicidal stands which serve no useful purpose, merely because the old Shogun code says a soldier is dishonored if he surrenders under any circumstances. In theory the man who gives himself up becomes a pariah and is an exile from his motherland.

Still, this Jap characteristic has been brought closer to home in the hand-to-hand conflict on the queer little American possession of Attu. It means trouble.

There could be no more pointed warning of the need of the utmost speed in cleaning up Hitler so that the entire Allied striking-power can be turned against the Nipponese at the earliest possible moment. The enormous force which the United Nations will be able to mass, when once the Axis is beaten, will do the job, but it becomes harder with each passing day allowed the Japs to consolidate their positions.

The burden of speeding up rests in large degree on intensification of civilian effort. If we provide the resources, the fighting services will do the rest. There can be no lag in production or conservation.

The Nipponese are pretty well established in their main conquests, and it's going to take a lot to shift them. Their greatest strength outside the Japanese mainland is in China and Manchuria.

A Chinese commentator in Chungking recently estimated the Jap forces in his country at thirty and a half divisions—say about 458,000 men. The Japanese have been moving troops from Manchuria, but there may be another half million or more there—watching Russia but available for service in China—and there are others in Korea.

THE NEW Jap offensive along the Yangtze towards Chungking has raised a fresh problem for Chinese defense. This drive undoubtedly is aimed at depriving Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek of provinces which provide about his last remaining resources. It may even envisage capture of Chungking itself.

Should such a program be achieved it probably would give the Japs control of all China. The Allies would have to start from scratch to fight their way onto the continent without the help of the Chinese army.

This would be a task which might take years, but for one thing. That is air power.

The further we go the more certain it seems that air power is going to provide the solution of the Japanese problem. Of course, all the other fighting services will be involved in a big way, but in trying to look ahead it would appear that there's only one method to wind up the war with Japan in our time.

That is by bombarding and blockading the Japanese mainland into submission. This presupposes that air bases will be available to the Allies. It also presupposes that the Japanese armies of occupation in foreign territory would capitulate when the homeland had been pounded into impotence—though one admits that there might be the bare possibility of Jap generals and their armies setting up a new regime on the continent and fighting it out.

THE 43-inch skirt is the newest war measure.

Not content with taking the cuffs off our pants and the tails off our shirts the War Production Board has gone snipping in the ladies department—Snipping . . . not snooping.

* * *

From now on no girl can get a double-breasted suit no matter how big her problems.

But she can't get a 44-inch skirt unless she fills out a form and sends it to Washington. It has to be a special form. The one she has now won't do, no matter how well it is filled out.

* * *

We should be seeing a lot of 72-inch girls in 43-inch skirts . . . quite a lot.

* * *

Hems used to be measured from the floor. They were 11 or 12 inches, or whatever the stylists decreed, from the floor.

* * *

The new system puts the hem anywhere from ankle to adenoids all depending on whether the girl is teeney-weeney or a look-at-the-size-of-that-one!

Timely Editorial

One Thing Leads To Another.

Already the phrase "fourth term" has become as familiar to the argumentative tongue as "third term" was beginning to be a year before the party conventions in 1940.

There is no precedent about a fourth term; the presidential term precedent was broken when Mr. Roosevelt was nominated and elected the third time. The way was opened, as was apparent even then, for any number of terms. Certainly there is now this difference, that whereas the third term was an issue inside the Democratic party in 1939, the fourth term seems already to have been accepted four years later by party members.

It is a perfect example of the way one thing leads to another. Any day now, as far as Democrats are concerned, will not be too soon to start mentioning the fifth term. —Canton Repository.

Dave Boone Says:

NOTHING has stirred this country so much in a long, long time as President Roosevelt finally coming out with a straight-from-the-shoulder, double-barreled blast at those labor men who, as he says, defy the WLB, challenge government by law and sabotage the prosecution of the war. America has been waiting for years for the president to get that mad.

* * *

His denunciation of men "who would impede for a single moment the production of materials needed for our war effort" was complete and scathing. It sounded like Teddy Roosevelt.

But he was a little off-center in saying "it is shocking to the nation to discover that any group within its citizenry" behave as the strikers have. The nation had ceased being shocked months ago. It has been waiting for the president to get shocked.

You can't help feeling what a blow it must have been to Henry Ford, alive and well at 79, to lose his only boy at 49. Henry would have gladly given all his millions to have saved Edsel.

* * *

Edsel was one millionaire's son who didn't concentrate on keeping himself in the limelight through night-club escapades, scandals, divorces and other cheap antics. He was happy with the original wife and family all his life.

Department of Justice May Press Cartel Suit Against Big Company

WASHINGTON—It hasn't leaked out yet, but the justice department is on the trail of another big anti-trust case which is going to create headlines—if the war department doesn't intervene. This time the giant National Lead company is involved.

The case is similar to the deals of Standard of New Jersey and the Aluminum corporation before the war to control synthetic rubber and magnesium in co-operation with Nazi cartels. In the National Lead case, Japanese as well as German business connections were concerned.

The deal was to control the production of titanium, a rare substance essential to the manufacture of paint, also to the cutting edge of tools.

The justice department has unearthed documents showing that National Lead had an agreement with I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany whereby, if war came, Nazi patents would be so held by National Lead in this country that they would not be seized by the Alien Property Custodian, but could be transferred back to Germany after the war.

This is not the first time National Lead has been under fire for its international business activities. For many years before the war, it co-operated with the big British-Dutch tin combine which forced the United States to ship raw tin all the way around the world from Singapore or Bolivia to England to be smelted, then back to the United States.

It took months of inter-government jockeying before Pearl Harbor to persuade government friends of National Lead to build a tin smelter in the U. S. A. as this country would be independent of the international tin cartel.

Fletcher Rockwell, president of National Lead, is also chairman of the board of Patino Mines and Enterprises, the company organized by the big Bolivian tin king, Patino.

Note: Whether the war department now steps in to block the justice department remains to be seen. Undersecretary of War Patterson has writhed in agony and protested to the White House when the justice department has tried to prosecute various big business combines whose products are essential to the war effort.

More Canned Goods.

HOUSEWIVES who will get more canned goods this summer can thank the senate's Truman committee. No one announced it officially but it was due to their probing that the army recently released 30,000,000 cases of canned fruits and vegetables for civilian use.

The Truman committee had revealed the fact that huge quantities of canned goods were being hoarded or unwisely used by the army, when fresh vegetables were easily available. Especially revealing was the cross-examination of Gen. E. B. Gregory, the army's quartermaster general, by Senator Brewster of Maine.

"Why does the army feed canned grapefruit to its troops in Miami," asked Brewster, "when grapefruit is growing fresh all over Florida?"

"Because the men are too lazy to prepare fresh grapefruit," was Gen. Gregory's frank reply.

He also admitted that green vegetables and fruits were readily available to army camps during a large part of the year, but that army commissaries purchased canned goods because it was easier to prepare than fresh vegetables.

The Truman committee also ascertained that the army was hoarding canned tomatoes equivalent to about 125 cans per soldier as against about 5 cans for every civilian per year. In fact, the amount of canned goods on hand for a ten million army was about the same as the amount expected to feed 130,000,000 civilians.

The Truman committee also found that as a result of this hoarding the packers and canners were in a quandary and expected to curtail production. They knew the army had over-purchased, could never use its vast stores of canned goods. So the canners figured the army would dump this back on the market, thereby causing an over-supply just at the wrong time. That was why 30,000,000 cases were turned back to civilian use by the army now, to ease the market while there is a civilian shortage.

Note: More probing of army food waste is in line, especially the habit of some army cooks of ordering several thousand chickens for Sunday dinner, when so many men are absent on leave.

Mail Bag.

N. J. R., Topeka, Kansas—If Axis prisoners are put to work as farm hands, they will be paid a minimum of 80 cents a day. This applies only to enlisted men; officer prisoners get an allowance ranging from $20 to $40 a month—without working. The Geneva convention provides that officer prisoners must not be compelled to work, but must be paid.

The same free mail privileges allowed to U. S. troops will be allowed to Axis prisoners, and also the same rations, with special dishes such as spaghetti for the Italians and sauerkraut for the Germans, so far as possible.

Officers not only don't have to work but are provided with orderlies from among the prisoners, who are paid 80 cents a day for this service.

The same treatment is supposed to be given to U. S. prisoners by Germany and Italy.

Major One Minute, Lieutenant Colonel the Next; Sergeant "Cork" Maple Has Ideas and Plans.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA—(By Wireless)—Two little profiles of men who fight—

When I first met Charles P. Stone on a Tunisian hillside he was a major. Within two hours he was a lieutenant colonel. The promotion consisted of nothing more than his regimental commander walking up and telling him about it.

Stone is a West Pointer and a regular army man. So was his father before him.

"I beat my father by 13 years," he says proudly. "He was 40 when he got his lieutenant-colonelcy."

Colonel Stone goes by the name of Charlie, and he calls his officers by their first names. He is tall and slender, his hair is short in a crew cut, and he has a front tooth missing. He had a one-tooth bridge but it came out in battle and he lost it.

Despite his rank he sleeps on the ground in the open, with only one blanket. He is friendly, but his decisions are quick and positive. I remember one night one of the other officers was speaking of "a dead stiff" they had found in the grass that evening. The officer speaking was one of Stone's best friends, but Stone instantly stopped the conversation and said:

"After this it will be 'dead soldiers.' None of this 'dead stiff' stuff."

Stone carries a couple of dozen big snapshots of his wife in his pocketbook. His home is at New Brunswick, N. J. He writes one letter a day no matter where he is. He manages to shave every three or four days. He paid almost no attention to little happenings around him such as wounded men coming up, prisoners passing, and shells landing too close.

Where the rest of us would look for a long time, and ask questions, he took one quick glance and then lay down. He has the ability to ignore all the little cluttering of war that have nothing to do with the action. He is a hard man to rattle. You could see that the whole complicated battle area and its hourly confusing changes were as clear as crystal in his mind. At 27 a battalion commander and a lieutenant colonel, with four big engagements behind him, I would wager heavy money on him to be a general before the war is over.

SERGT. JACK MAPLE, of Culver City, Calif., is one of those funny guys. The boys of his infantry company say Maple is about a hundred and twenty per cent. While he's around he's the kind who makes himself the butt of his own jokes. When a visitor shows up the others gather around to hear him perform.

Sergeant Maple says he fully intends to be a hero every time he's in a battle but somehow there's always so much suction in his foxhole that he can't get out of it. Sergeant Maple says he expects to be the Sergeant York of this war, but since he's a little slow in starting he has nicknamed himself Sergeant Cork.

"What kinda headlines they gonna put on your piece?" he asked me. "Can you get 'em to put a big headliner clear across the front page in San Francisco or Los Angeles saying 'Sergeant Cork Maple Is Hero of Tunisia'?"

I told him I would use my influence.

Cork says he has all the hard luck. He pulled a tiny piece of shrapnel out of his pocket. It was paper thin and about the size of a pinhead. "That's my souvenir," he said. "It landed on top of my hand and didn't even break the skin."

When I saw it I just looked at it and said:

"Cork Maple, if it had been anybody else in the company it would have gone clear through his hand and he'd have got the next hospital boat home. But you can be smothered by 88's and they won't even draw blood on you."

Maple has his after-war career all mapped out. He's going to open a sort of night club in Los Angeles. He will call it the Eighty-eight. All the drinks will have war names, such as Airburst, Stuka, Bouncing Baby and so on. The booths will be foxholes in the floor, and the place will be full of booby traps that will go off and scare people.

"I oughta be able to get somebody to back it," he says. "There'll still be some suckers left after the war."

"It sounds good to me," I said, "but if I put it in the paper some patriot will steal your idea and have the club before you get home.

"That's all right," he said. "If you put it in the paper, that'll be a record that it is my idea. Then if somebody steals it I can sue him. Maybe I'd make more money that way anyhow. Go ahead and put it in."

And as I walked down the hill Sergeant Cork called after me:

"And don't forget the big headline now! Clear across the front page!"

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

BITS OF LIFE

A THICK slice of homemade bread spread with sweet yellow butter—and a handful of tender green onions, right out of the garden. . . . Taking down the clean clothes from the line, just ahead of a shower. Odor better than perfume, that smell of white, air filled sheets—faintly reminiscent of soft yellow soap, a black iron pot by the waterside, and the wooden tubs my mother used to use. . . . Sergeant the gamboling puppy, jumping into the depths of the watercress, over his head, and lying there to keep cool on a warm afternoon. . . . A basket of clean white eggs on the swinging shelf of a country cellar. . . . A smoke house hung with yellow-brown hams and bacon—cured, smoked, and ready for storing. . . . The bloom on garden peas. . . . The echo of a neighbor's musical voice as he calls his cows. . . . The song of the first whippoorwill, in the moonlight, before a rain. . . .

IN a newly built house, in the woods by the road, I saw a young mother, alone, working at the inside finishing. Beside her a cot where two little girls, one past three, the other less than two were asleep—a rosy face at each end of the bed clothes, a dark head and a light one. The older had a doll securely wrapped, beside her. The little one was on her knees, with her cheek against the pillow. Her tiny right hand clutched a pink rattle.

The young father was away at work in a defense plant. Soon he will be called to the colors. The voice of the mother is plaintive and sweet as she sings to her sleeping children.

"LAST Monday I had an adventure," writes an old lady. "The family here insist on taking too good care of me. I must not walk much, or get into traffic, or cross a street. . . . I said once I'd rather be bumped (gently) by a car than be afraid to cross by myself. They want to handle me like a precious egg or a beefsteak . . . as though I might snap, somehow.

"Well—Sister had an appointment and I went into a store for a minute's shopping, intending to return to the car. Not finding what I wanted, I went to another store — and got 'turned around!' I never crossed that street, but as truly as I tell you, by and by I was walking in the opposite direction on the other side. I plodded along, on my crutch, enjoying myself hugely while people looked and pitied me. (Nobody bumps into you if you have a crutch, and a motorist will stop 30 feet away.)

"I walked until I came to where Sister had her appointment . . . so far I couldn't walk back to the car—where my brother-in-law was Casabianca all the time!

"It is nice that people go out of their way to help foolish old ladies."

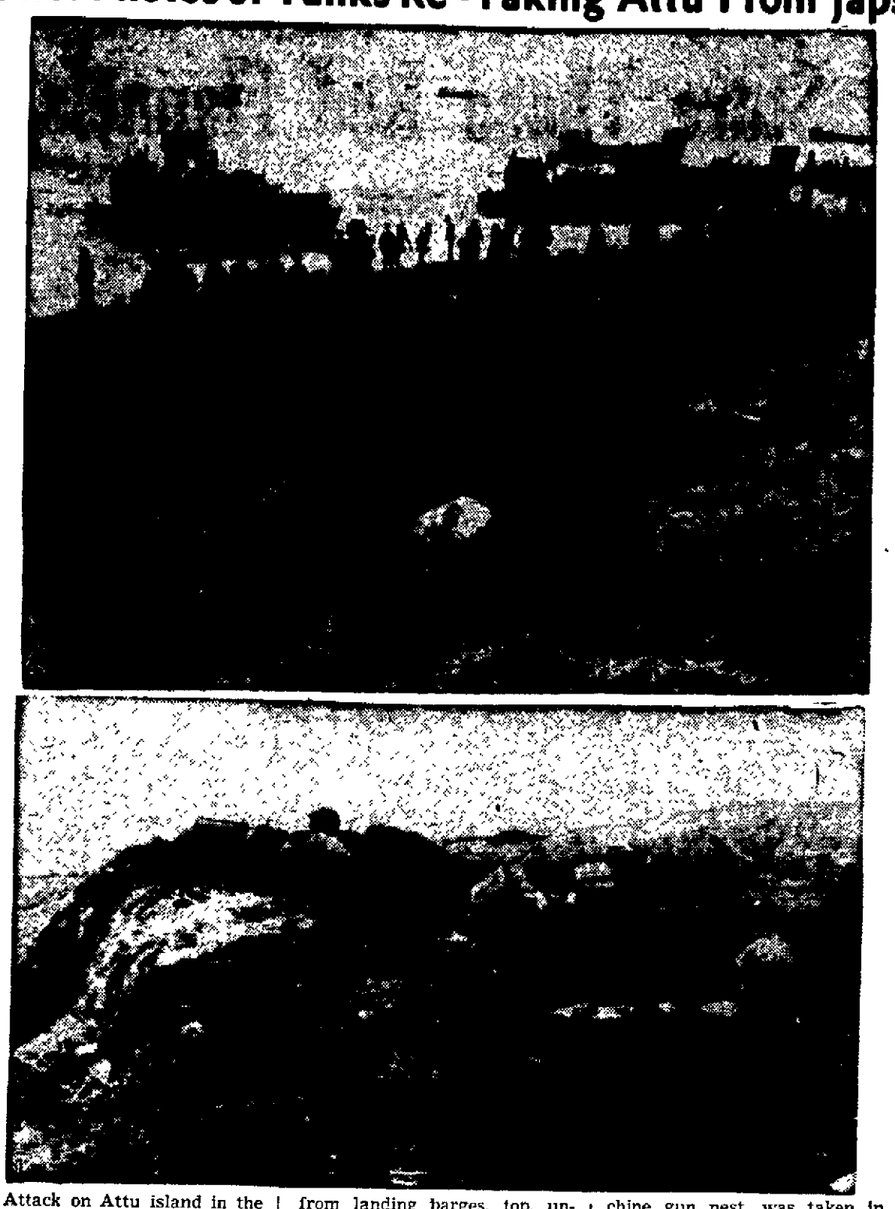
First Photos of Yanks Re-Taking Attu From Japs



Attack on Attu island in the Aleutians by American troops is shown in these first photos of the new offensive. Hundreds of soldiers land on the black, volcanic sands of Massacre bay from landing barges, top, unload their equipment and start after the Jap defenders. A foothold established, the Yanks pushed inland, where the lower picture, of an American machine gun nest, was taken in the front lines by a photographer who had to crawl on his stomach to avoid being struck by enemy fire. These are official U. S. Navy photos.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Older boys and girls, especially those ready for high school, who follow the new books of the day may be interested in two new books which will be placed in the children's section at Mansfield Public Library Saturday.

LONG ADVENTURE by Hildegarde Hawthorne gives a close-up view of Prime Minister Churchill and a dramatic sketch of the background for the present war. There are many rollicking incidents and adventures of the young army officer, and correspondent of the Boer and Warld wars and of the rising political figure in Parliament. The dramatic ending is a reward for the reading of political history of the last war.

Also recommended to young readers is SALUTE TO VALOR by Linton Wells. This well-known commentator has grouped here some of the heroic deeds of men and women of the United Nations in this war. They show the courage of the home front as well as that shown on the battlegrounds of land, sea and air.

IN TRAINING

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—(U.P.)—The Army and Navy aren't the only branches of service which can boasts of parent and child members.

At the second WAAC training center here are Auxiliary Lola K. Trueblood and her daughter, Aux. F. Madelyn Trueblood, both of Indianapolis, Ind.

Madelyn, a former semi-professional softball player with the Hoosier Athletic Club, enrolled in the WAAC's last January. Her mother arrived here one month later.

NO DRIVING ON RIMS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(U.P.)—City officials don't mind how much damage a motorist or a bicyclist does to a machine by driving it on its rims, but it does object to the damage that is done to pavements and roadways by such practices. They are, therefore, drafting an ordinance that will enable the police to "jug" anyone caught in this diverting amusement.

WILDCAT STRIKE MARS PEACEFUL LABOR PICTURE

Workers Leave Jobs at Plant in Cleveland as Others Return at Toledo.

(By United Press)

Workers streamed back to their jobs today at war plants in Akron and Toledo, but a new "wildcat" strike interrupted the otherwise peaceful labor picture of northern Ohio.

As production resumed in major rubber plants at Akron after a five day strike and resumption of production of army vehicles at Toledo was assured shortly, approximately 190 members of the United Automobile Workers union (AFL) walked out at the Buckeye Brass and Manufacturing company at Cleveland.

The company manufactures parts for airplanes. The stoppage began as preparations were underway for a consent election between the UAW and the independent Buckeye Brass Employes' association to choose a collective bargaining agent.

A union organizer charged the walkout was prompted by "intimidation" of workers by two officers of the independent union.

Some 4,700 members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) at the Spicer Manufacturing company voted today to return to their jobs of producing axles and transmissions for army jeeps tomorrow morning.

The jeep assembly line, however, at the Willys Overland company will be unable to resume until Tuesday. Willys officials said not enough axles and transmissions would be on hand or would be received from the Spicer plant to begin production until Tuesday.

Meanwhile, 51,000 United Rubber Workers (CIO) returned to their jobs at the four major rubber companies at Akron. Normal production was expected to be restored late today. Company officials estimated that $17,000,000 in war production was lost during the actual five days of strikes.

Miners, Operators Still Far Apart

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The United Mine Workers and bituminous coal operators were reported far apart today in their stands on portal-to-portal pay, the key issue awaiting settlement in their 10-week dispute.

The operators refused to reveal their attitude, but a reliable source said they were insisting on a formula which would provide the miners an additional 80 cents daily The UMW is demanding about $2.

SON BORN

GALION—A son was born Thursday at City hospital to Mr and Mrs. Francis Caris of South street.

Report Industry Did 'Good Job' On Black-Out Test

Mansfield industries did a "generally good" job in last week's test black-out.

That was the report submitted to Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, civilian defense co-ordinator, by Ohio State Guardsmen, who acted as observers at the factories which participated in the test.

It was the first time local war plants have participated in the city-wide black-outs and the act was voluntary. Plants which showed satisfactory results may now apply to the state OCD office for exemption from future tests.

As listed by the guardsmen, Mansfield war plants satisfactorily meeting all black-out rules and regulations are: Dominion Electric company, Ideal Electric, Hughes-Keenan and Ohio Brass company.

Those reported for minor infractions, such as having small inside or outside lights on during the warning signal or not complying with siren signals include Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, now satisfactorily corrected; Farm Tools, Inc., infraction corrected; Great Lakes Steel corporation, infraction corrected; Humphryes Mfg. company, infraction yet to be checked; Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, infraction to be checked; Tappan Stove company, infraction to be checked, and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, minor infractions corrected.

Announcement was made today by Kalbfleisch that a plant protection officer for the city will soon be appointed to direct all plant black-out problems under the direction of the executive director.

LARSEN RITES ARE CONDUCTED

Funeral services were conducted today at the Jones Memorial for Mrs Ernest H. Larsen, 55, of 625 Bigelow road, who died Monday at the Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland.

In Mansfield for the services were her two sons, Rex V. Larsen, member of the air corps, Kearns, Utah, and Robert Larsen, O. C. T., Ft. Belfore, Va.

Pallbearers were Leo Blackstone, Floyd Appleman, V. P. Sparks, S. S. Matthes, Rex Averill and Leo Perl, Ohio Brass company associates of her husband. Rev. Peter Young of First Congregational church, officiated and burial was in Mansfield cemetery

Surviving besides her husband and two sons, are a daughter, Marilyn, at home, a sister, Mrs Agnes Bachman, New Kensington, Pa., and two brothers, Manfred and Albert Anderson, both of Akron.

HALF OF OHIO'S WAR WORKERS SEE TIRES WORN OUT THIS YEAR

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Some 50 per cent of the war workers in Ohio expect their tires to be worn out by the end of the year, the federal works agency reported, predicting a "crisis in the situation"

A survey of 55,000 car owners conducted at 59 Ohio war industries by the Ohio planning survey in co-operation with the public roads administration of the FWA and the highway traffic advisory committee to the war department revealed the following estimate.

Some 18 per cent of owners gloomily anticipate their tires will fail before July 1, while 32 per cent give their rubber until the latter half of 1943

Investigators termed the Ohio analysis "conservative" since studies made at 78 establishments in nine other states which were not specified showed relatively worse tire conditions

On the basis of the findings the investigators said "a high percentage of tires on automobiles owned by war workers will evidently require recapping or replacement during the latter part of 1943 This, coupled with the likelihood that the production of synthetic rubber will not be in full swing before sometime in 1944, appears certain to produce a crisis in the tire situation before the end of the current year"

Studies showed that 12 per cent of the cars reported had no spare tire and that in the case of approximately half the vehicles which had five tires, the extra tire had less than 4,000 miles of service remaining.

The investigators predicted "the situation will remain critical after the crisis is passed, since synthetic rubber production will apparently not be able to provide enough rubber for civilian needs before late in 1944, while the demand for tires and tubes will continue to be high for an indefinite period."

Conservation measures recommended included speeding up the recapping service, continuing car sharing programs, and low operating speed regulations

Housewives Hear Talk on 'Drying Foods for Victory'

"YOU will solve some of next winter's food problems if you preserve vegetables and fruits now," Mrs. Julia Kiene said yesterday in addressing the Health for Victory meeting at the Westinghouse plant.

Two methods of preserving foods—dehydration and brining—were explained and demonstrated by Mrs. Kiene, and June Health for Victory meal-planning guides containing step-by-step instruction were distributed to the homemakers.

"Dehydrating or drying is one of the best ways to preserve non-acid vegetables," Mrs. Kiene explained. "The secret of success in drying foods lies in the removal of enough moisture to prevent spoilage. armful bacteria, which cause spoilage, cannot thrive without moisture," she said.

The Health for Victory members were told that the vegetables best suited for dehydration are corn, beans, peas, carrots and okra. The best fruits are apples, pears, peaches and apricots. Strawberries do not dry well but dewberries blackberries, gooseberries and raspberries are excellent for drying.

"Not only is it important to select the right foods for drying, but it also is essential to use the proper methods of dehydration," Mrs. Kiene pointed out. The six steps are: (1) Use tree-ripened fruit free from blemishes, and table-fresh vegetables that are tender, crisp and thoroughly clean. (2) Dry immediately, that is, be prepared to start the dehydrating process as soon as the fuits and vegetables have been gathered. (3) Blanch vegetables and dip or sulphur fruits before dehydrating them. (4) Make sure there is an even flow of air circulating through the evaporator or oven and around and over the fruit or vegetable being dehydrated. (5) Provide sufficient heat to dry the fruit or vegetables as quickly as possible, without scorching the food. (6) Store the dehydrated foods properly in a cool, dry, dark place.

Steam-blanching is an important procedure to save soluble food materials, set the color of vegetables, remove objectionable odors, hasten drying and check the ripening processes. The speaker said that as a source of heat for indoor dehydrators an oven, light bulbs, range surface burners and portable heaters may be used.

Turning to brining as a method of preserving foods, Mrs. Kiene said it does two things: withdraws moisture from the food and makes it impossible for harmful bacteria to thrive; creates a chemical action that enables desirable bacteria to grow. The combined action is known scientifically as "selective bactterial action."

"There are two ways of brining vegetables—dry salt and wet salt. The dry salt method can be done with or without fermentation, depending upon the vegetable. The wet salt method uses either a light or a heavy brine solution, also depending upon the vegetable," the home economist said.

Mrs. Kiene emphasized that the Health for Victory members would find complette informaton on dehydrating and brining in the June meal-planning guides prepared by the Westinghouse Home Economics Institute and distributed at the meeting.

Detailed information about the proper choice of foods to be dried or brined, photographs illustrating the procedures, and complete descriptions of the equipment required are included in the June Health for Victory meal-planning guides, in addition to suggested menus and recipes for every day in the month.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I WILL GO over at once," Noel said, and with a hasty kiss for Mary went out of the door. Mary put up the night chain slowly and closed the door, then turned to me with keen eyes which held a tinge of mirthfulness.

"Come clean!" she adjured me. "Where was little Stevie when you barged in here? Of course keeping Noel in the dark was the only thing to do but I have a yen for the 'truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth'."

"You shall have it," I said. "When Adams and I reached this floor, he stopped short opposite this apartment, darted through the door marked 'Exit' and neatly nabbed our Thespian friend. Then he gave me instructions about telephoning Father, and having everybody stay here until he telephoned back, and I came in here."

"That's the way I thought it must be," Mary said, adding viciously: "That louse, Steve, must have been planning to have me call off Constance for him!"

Planned a Warning

"I think, rather, he was planning to beg you to come back to the cast," I said, smiling. "He probably meant to give you the argument that you would lose your public if you stayed away too long."

"There may be something in that," Mary said.

I caught the devil of amusement in her eyes, and laughed at and with her. "I don't imagine you are worrying much about that," I told her.

"My hair isn't going to turn white over-night thinking about it!" she retorted.

Then we chattered about trivialities until Katharine's knock sounded on the door. Noel was with her, but as soon as she was safely inside, he gave us a quick adieu and hurried back through the corridor to the elevator.

"Now, we'll go to work," Katharine said, and going into Mary's bedroom brought out a long box in which lay a large half cast. Mary slipped her leg into it and Katharine began to wind it with bandages.

"We do this whenever a knock comes at the door," Katharine said. "If Noel is here he entertains the caller until I came from the bedroom and say that Mary is able to receive visitors. That way, nobody suspected that she is as able to run around as she ever was."

A minute later, she had completed her task, lifted Mary's leg to a chair, and thrown a colorful afghan over her knees. "Now get on your invalid expression," Katharine commanded, and Mary transformed her features so quickly that if I had not known the ruth, I would have sworn she was really suffering.

"Don't extend the impersonation," I told her smiling. "It is altogether too painful to me if not to you."

Mary grinned. "Thank you for the compliment," she said. "But now I'm going to weep as you tackle those bandages. Theye're simply criminal, there are so many of them."

I mentally echoed her plaint as I toiled over the bandages, under Katharine's keen eyes, trying in vain to equal the speed and deftness with which her hands arranged them, but after many efforts at least succeeding in winning her commendation.

Then I put a question: "If Mary's foot and leg are always covered by an afghan, why bother with all this mummery."

"Because," Mary said, "there's always the chance of somebody barging in who inadvertently would catch a foot or a hand in the afghan and drag it off. Then the fat would be in the fire."

The telephone punctuated her explanation, and I went to answer it. Olina was at the other end.

"Oh, hello, Aunt Madge," she said cheerily. "Will you tell Mary that if her cast is properly adjusted, I'm coming over to see her?"

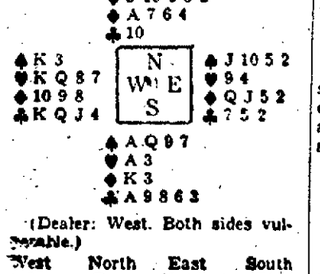
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

USE THEM SEPARATELY

ECONOMY IS necessary to those who are poor, including declarers who are not rich in trumps. When you have a dangerously small number of them, it usually pays to try to avoid expending two on a trick. Stringing them out by using just one at a time, for ruffing purposes, may make them do a much bigger job, even if you get over-ruffed once or twice. Sometimes a meager total of seven trumps in your own hand and dummy may be profitably distributed through seven different tricks.



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Dbl
1 ♥	Dbl	2 ♣	Dbl
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	2 ♠

There you have a pretty good example of the fiercely competitive bidding that occurs sometimes among the masters in match-point pair championships. Notice that there were six different bids and three doubles in the course of that auction, though it wound up at the low contract of only 2-Spades. This deal came in the national individual masters' championship, at a time when Charles H. Goren, of Philadelphia, was in the North opposite Lee Hazen, of New York—two of the world's greatest.

West opened the club K, and Mr. Hazen, after study, embarked upon separate use of the seven trumps he could marshal. He took the opener with the club A, ruffed the club 3 with the spade 4, led to the diamond K, ruffed the club 6 with the spade 6, came to the heart A, ruffed the club 8 with the spade 8 and saw East over-ruff with the 10, and won the returned diamond Q with the dummy's A. The heart J was given up to the Q and West returned the K, East discarding a diamond and the spade 7 ruffing. Now the club 9 was ruffed by East's spade 2 and the diamond J returned to be ruffed by the spade 9 and over-ruffed by the K. The last two tricks were South's with the spade Q and A.

Mr. Hazen had put trumps on seven different tricks. He won five of those, plus three side aces and a king, giving him nine tricks for a good score on the deal.

Tomorrow's Problem

How should North play this deal at 5-Hearts after East leads the diamond 9?

Attu Assignment for Yanks Tough as Any In All Wars

COLD FIGHTS WITH JAPS ON ALEUTIAN ISLE

Americans Must Battle Damp, Ice, Grime While Foe Snipes at Them Continuously.

(Editor's Note: Here is the first dispatch received from Howard Handleman, International News Service war correspondent in Attu, giving an eyewitness description of the fighting for possession of the volcanic island. Handleman went ashore with the American forces in the invasion of Attu. Transmission and communication difficulties have delayed receipt of this dispatch.)

By HOWARD HANDLEMAN
(INS Staff Correspondent)

HOLTZ BAY, Attu Island, The Aleutians, May 20 (Delayed)—American soldiers now in the process of wiping the Japs off Attu island fought under conditions as bad as men have ever faced in war.

Living in foxholes, in the open, and eating cold food, mainly, the men never got warm, nor comfortable. There was no real rest, no real letdown from the battle against the Jap and the elements.

As Maj. Steadman Chandler of San Francisco put it, "This is no island warfare, this is mountain warfare."

The Japs recognized this and sent a crack mountain outfit, the Formosa mountain troopers, to garrison the island.

The Jap knew the mountain, and used it. His snipers sent bullets singing at our feet and over our heads, and when his sniper was silenced by either our rifle or artillery fire, it was only one Jap gone. The enemy's loss in each instance was a minor one.

In addition to the natural hiding places offered by a mountain, the Jap had fog and clouds to work on his side part of the time. With knowledge of our whereabouts, Jap snipers hid above the fog line and let go in our general direction. There was no marksmanship, and our losses were few from this type of fighting, but each sniper presented a problem that had to be solved.

The first night ashore, soldiers moving ahead unopposed slipped and fell repeatedly. They weren't used to the Aleutians and didn't yet know that it is necessary to walk with your head down, your eyes on every foot of ground. They learned quickly, though, and it wasn't long before they all had the "Aleutian slough" and were walking with heads down and two good feet under them.

Water was ample from the many streams fed by melting snow. It was good water, too, rushing fast through the valleys. But it was snow water, too cold for a man to wash comfortably.

Clothing hadn't been removed for days, hands had been washed only rarely, and every man had a firm growth of bristles on his face.

The constant dampness, poured down by the fog and held by the muskeg, was every man's enemy. Up front men pinned down for hours by snipers suffered horrible pain from trench foot and had to be evacuated to the hospital ships standing offshore.

One man, shivering on a litter, told me he had crouched six hours in an icy stream, unable to raise his head because he would provide a target for the Jap who had him covered, but whom he couldn't see.

The day usually began at about 6 and ended when the sun went down, just short of 11 p. m. The shooting died down between those hours, although the navy did do some night bombardment and the Japs on the western point of Chichagof harbor did shell the little beach on which we landed during the hours of darkness.

The front line troops snatched what sleep they could in their hurriedly scooped out foxholes. Blankets and sleeping bags were moved forward to them whenever possible, but many men never had anything but their comparatively light combat clothing to sleep in.

But these men, cold, constantly wet, often dazed and dulled by lack of sleep and continued shelling, whipped the Japs who had comparatively cozy huts to fall back to when they needed rest.

WINS PAROLE FROM OHIO PEN

George Fancher, sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary in 1939 for kidnaping Harold Stauffer in Mansfield, will be paroled July 1 after serving five years of a five-to-30-year sentence, the Ohio Pardon and Parole commission announced today.

Fancher said he was under the influence of liquor when he and Earl S. Montgomery forced Stauffer to drive into the country where they took his watch, one dollar in money, and his car, and drove to Marion where the couple was apprehended.

Montgomery also was sentenced to the pen for five to 30 years. The parole board continued his case until May, 1945. Montgomery was charged with armed robbery as well as kidnaping.

GIVE PROGRAM

Country Day Pupils Present Field Day Exercises.

Races, folk dances, acrobatics and other physical exhibitions were a part of the County Day School field day exercises held in the school yesterday afternoon.

The program opened with presentation of the colors, pledge of allegiance to the flag and the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." A relay obstacle race with two teams of six each in competition was followed by a singing game presented by the kindergarten. The third, fourth and fifth grades took part in a dash and a sack race pitted five pupils against five others.

Folk dancing by the primary and upper grades and an obstacle race by the kindergarten preceded acrobatics by the kindergarten, primary and upper grades. The program was closed by a tug-of-war and the singing of the school song.

DENIED VIEW

Mother Refused Permission to See Babies She Drowned.

PITTSBURGH —(INS)— Despite her almost hysterical pleas to see the bodies of the two baby daughters she confessed drowning, Mrs. Katherine Gump, 27-year-old wife of a Brookline gas company employe, was kept in jail today to await an inquest and also a test of her sanity.

Detectives, to whom Mrs. Gump admitted immersing her tiny daughters, Sandra Rae, 2, and Katherine Elaine, four months, in a bathtub of water, were compelled to refuse the distraught mother permission to see the children because she was to undergo a test by state psychiatrists later in the day.

BAKERY CONTROVERSY BRINGS 3 INTO CITY, COUNTY COURTS

In an attempt to halt the removal of a wall in a bakery property at 429 Springmill treet, three owners of the building today took their case into common pleas and municipal courts at the same time. Three carpenters on the job were held to the grand jury on charges of malicious destruction of property after a hearing in municipal court and the tenant in the building was fined $150 and costs in common pleas court for contempt of court.

Arrester last night by police and bound to the grand jury this morning in municipal court were D. D. Tyson, 559 Park avenue west, the head carpenter; A. C. Remy, 363 South Diamond street, and Jacob P. Folmer, 205 South Main street, his assistants. They were released under $200 bond each.

While their hearing was in progress, Harley S. Nighwander, tenant in the bakery property, was cited in common pleas court for contempt on the accusation that he told the carpenters to go ahead with the work despite a restraining order granted yesterday by Common Pleas Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch. He was fined $150 and asked to post $125 bond to assure that the building would be put back in condition.

The action started with a suit filed Wednesday in common pleas court by the bakery property owners. Mrs. Rhea Russell, 443 Marion avenue; Mrs. DaLee Hahn, 601 Heineman boulevard, and Mrs. Frances Uhlich, 124 Glenwood boulevard. They contended that Nighwander was damaging their building by having a wall removed so that bakery equipment and the heating plant could be taken from the structure.

They asked further that Nighswander be restrained from continued use of the name "Uhlich" in the bakery business because it causes confusion concerning credit and bill collections due to the fact that Mrs. Frances Uhlich is now operating an adjoining business known as the "Uhlich Wholesale Pie Bakery." This part of the case has not been heard.

FORMING BOARD

WMC To Name Group To Hear Employe, Employer Appeals.

Appointment of a four-member Richland county board to hear worker and employer appeals under the War Manpower commission labor stabilization program by early next week was forecast today by C. W. Handley, manager of the Mansfield office of the U. S. Employment service.

The board will be named by the WMC regional office at Cleveland and will include two men representing labor and two from the ranks of industrial management.

Board members will be called upon to decide the cases of workers and employers who are unable to agree on the release of employes to take other jobs.

A worker can walk out on any job, essential or otherwise, without a release from his employer, but the job seeker probably would have trouble finding another unless he can show his release, Handley said.

Decisions of the county board may be appealed to a regional board at Cleveland and then to a national board, according to Handley.

GIVEN LIFE

Michigan Youth Sentenced For Girl's Murder.

IONIA, Mich. —(INS)— Donald Temelco, 18-year-old high school student, today faced life imprisonment at hard labor for the strangulation murder of Clara Johnson, 18, Ionia war worker.

Judge Morris K. Davis sentenced Temelco last night after a jury returned a verdict of guilty of first degree murder after two hours deliberation.

COUNCIL GETS PAVING PLANS NEXT TUESDAY

$73,000 Project Set Up By State For Route 42; City Cost To Be $30,000.

The state highway department today submitted a $73,000 street project to the city for action by council and agreed to pay at least $44,000 of the total cost. Mayor W. J. Locke said the project would be presented to city council at a meeting Tuesday night.

The project calls for the resurfacing of South Main street and Lexington avenue from Central park to the city limits, widening of the intersection of the two streets and Lexington avenue from Davis road to Cook road, resurfacing of Marion avenue from Glessner to Cline avenues and Park avenue west from West Park drive to Linden road.

The city and property owners who benefit by the improvements will share $30,000 of the cost while the state will pay the rest since all the streets are state or federal highways, Mayor Locke said. The city must pay for the right-of-way for widening Lexington avenue and South Main street.

Cost of the project includes Lexington avenue, $39,310; South Main street, $16,020; Park avenue west, $5,510; Marion avenue, $8,580.

Highway department representatives said they had not received the approval of the War Production board of the projected, but they expressed the opinion the work would be permitted since it concerns federal routes necessary for war transportation.

CAR ON FIRE

Firemen Put Out Blaze on Freight Train.

Mansfield firemen early today extinguished a blaze in an express car on a westbound Erie train after the flames had destroyed at least 10 truck tires and damaged other goods in the car.

Firemen received the call about 1 a. m. as the train was leaving Union station. The train was stopped at the Bowman street crossing where fire equipment from Central and No. 2 stations put out the flames.

An estimate of the damage was not available and firemen did not learn the origin of the blaze.

THEATERS

In Dramatic Role.

Mickey Rooney leaves behind the unique comedy characterization of Andy Hardy to step into his first real dramatic role of his career in "The Human Comedy," which opens tomorrow at the Ohio for a week's run. The picture deals with family life in a typical American small town. The Macauley family, for instance, is poor in worldly goods, but spiritually rich. Ma Macauley is a widow and her oldest son, Marcus, is a private in the army. Mickey Rooney is the second son. He gets a messenger's job in a telegraph office, working after school so that he can help out at home. Rooney's severest Hollywood critics, who have long "panned" him admit that his performance in "The Human Comedy" establishes him as a true star.

Immortal Sergeant.

"Immortal Sergeant," story of blazing desert warfare in Libya, opens tomorrow at the Ritz. Starring Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara, the film was translated to the screen from John Brophy's novel of the same name. The picture shows average men growing to the stature of heroes under an incredible strain. A supporting cast includes Thomas Mitchell, Allyn Joslyn and Reginald Gardiner. Other attraction at the Ritz is "Carson City Cyclone," a western film, starring Tom Linden, Emmett Lynn and Don "Red" Bolt. The pictures run through Monday.

"Desert Victory."

"Desert Victory," which is due to open at the Madison tomorrow, is the day-by-day account of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's rout at the hands of Montgomery's Eighth Army. The full-length picture was filmed in the field by film units of the British Army and RAF. The British march into Tripoli, after a bloody 1,400-mile battle across the desert is one of the greatest scenes of the picture. Also shown are Rommel's brilliantly planned but poorly executed war moves. Second attraction at the Medison is "The Desperadoes."
